temper of Congress:

A single day's objection and intercourse among the members of Congress has led to the conclusion that, with wo or three insignifi cant exceptions, the S nators and Representa tives agree in utter d testation of the whole rebellion, and in the q compromising spirit of putting it down at chatever cost. Among those most urgent and resolute in taking these positions are Democra s. There is, indeed, a good deal of different as to the means or manners of giving effect to this policy. Some are for a declaration nof emancipation of the shaves of the insurgerts; others for the confiscation of slave property; and another class for levying a tax upon the slaveholders, so that they may hy such a process feel the heaviest burdens of the war. But on all sides, as wellon the part of Thuddel's Stevens, in the House, and Lymen Trumbul in the Senate, as well among the ultra Resublicans as among the ultra Democrats, there is an open expression that the property of the loyal slaveholders shall be protected or paid for. A good deal of annecessary clamor had been created by mis-chievous men on this subject. The friends of the Administration and the war have only to keep their eye on the issue on which they really do agree as abd e stated, and they cannot divide. One great truth stands out prominently, that the property of the traitors is forfeited by the acts of the traitors, and that it would be unjust to except property in slaves from this rule. All our loyal people ask that the houses and lands, and gold and silver, and stocks and securities, and cotton and powder, and cannon and ships of Jefferson Davis and his robber associates, should be confiscated, and, rather than it should be used to damage and destroy the Union should be annihilated. Would it not be monsti hus if we excepted from this rule the slaves of Javis and his followers? How to dispose of the slaves, whether they shall be liberated or at med-whether the own ership in them shall be confiscated or taxedare matters wisely left by the President and Secretary of War to the military authorities. No doubt Congress will pass some law by which these authorities may be guided in the disposition of this vexed quistion; but their action will, in his opinion, be regulated by the suggestions of the President and the reasoning of his respective constitutional advisers."

WOULD NOT Kiss A REBEL .- The Cairo correspondent of the Missouri Democrat relates wear-for use and not for show. the following incident in connection with the notice of a skirmish of ar that point with some Rebel gan boats:

A Rebel spy named Chappel came into the parlor, and in conversation outraged those present by his bold and insulting language. Some left the room, while others expressed their indignation and disgust. Finally he called the child of an American officer, playing at him mother's side, a little girl of three years, and asked her to kiss him. She bachfully hesitated, when he urged, "Come, won't you kiss a Rebel?" With the scornful air of an indignant queen, she replied, "No, I will not."

One of the ladies simple to restrain her indignation, cried out, That is right! That is noble! Never kiss a kindle and a traitor to his sortment of
