A PENNSYLVANIA SCHOOL TEACHER IN DIX-E .- The Caffo correspondent of the New York Tribune, vouches for the following sketch: "School teaching is supposed to be profitable in the slave States. Albert Salisbury, went from Tioga County, Pennsylvania, to Arkansas, and engaged in school teaching. Two years ago, he married a young lady, a Miss Dicky, from near Bloomington, Ill., who had also been teaching in the vicinity of Pine Bluff, in a planter's family. Mr. Salisbury had bought a small farm above Pikeville, and laboring on it during his leisure hours, had created a beautiful home, and they lived in a nice style. Both were well liked by their neighbors previous to the war. Of course, his school was broken up; of course he was ordered to leave. It is not an easy matter to drive a native of Northern Pennsylvania from his own farm. Last August the rebels approached his house through a corn field, and shot at him while he was eating his dinner. They shot through the back door, he ran out of the front door and gained the woods. He was wounded in his shoulder. Towards midnight he came back. His wife lay dead on the bed; she neither had been shot or beaten. When last I saw him, he was a scout bound for Arkansas with the great expedition."

-Does any reader know from what part of this County, Mr. Salisbury emigrated?

FIRE IN CHARLESTON .- This morning (Saturday) about 2 o'clock, our citizens were awakened from their peaceful slumbers by the cry of fire. We all started for the scene of confiagration; some on foot, some bare foot, and some on horseback. We finally arrived at Stilman Frost's, and found his smoke house manner for a (that is, a hollow log,) in flames; his ham's, &c., destroyed. From the smoke house, the fire had caught required a strenuous effort to keep it from the house. Mr. Frost lost one hundred lbs. of meat, and ten cords of wood. Cheap enough. We see in almost ever paper we, take up, fire, and still men see a hole in

A liberal discount made to CASH PURCHASERS. per we take up, fire, fire, and still men see a hole in the stove pipe, a crack in the stove or chimney, and go to bed and sleep as soundly as if all was well, untill they are aroused by the roar of fire or the suffocating effect of smoke—the house is consumed. Citizens have been started by the cry of fire! They gathor ground the burning mass expose their lives and health, and really feel sorry that in the providence of God, Neighbor --- has been stript of house and home, when, if he had repaired his stove pipe or chimney, Providence would not have destroyed his house. Again, how many take up ashes and set them down full of fire, in the wood shed adjoining the house .-There is no doubt but that eight tenths of the fires, are through carelessness, or neglect. But a word to the wise, is sufficient. CITIZEN. CHERRY FLATTS, April 19, 1862.
