THOSE SOUTHERN GRAVES. BY KISS M. W. EDGAR.

These southern graves, those southern graves! In which our northern heroes lie-No weeping-willow o'er them waves, No monument of marble craves The notice of the passer-by.

Not e'en a summer's grass has grown Above each sacred, silent bed,
Marked by the small, gray mounds alone—
To the great, busy world unknown,
They sleep the sleep of the dead. But there are hearts, fond hearts that yearn

To kneel beside those mounds of clay, And shed the up-pent tears which burn,
And shed the up-pent tears which burn,

The father's pride, the mother's joy, Unwatched, unwept, there mouldering lie; But ah! stern death cannot deatroy The true life of the soldier-boy Who dies that freedom may not die.

In coming years those graves shall be Forever sacred in our sight— Bright beacon lights of Liberty Strong sentinels to guard the free Great alters unto Truth and Right. THE GOVERNOR'S ESCAPE.

When the British and Tories attacked New London, Connecticut, in 17-, and set a prize on the head of Gov. Griswold, the latter fled to the town of I,, where his cousin, Mrs. Martin, hid him, for some days, in a secluded farm-house. But at length the subtle foe discovered his retreat; and one sunny afternoon in May, he was routed from his hiding place, by the tidings that a band of horsemen were approaching to capture him. His only chance of escape was to reach the mouth of a little creek, which emptied itself into the Connecticut river, just above the entrance of the latter into Long Island Sound .-There he had a boat stationed with two faithful attendants, hidden beneath the high hanks of the creek. The distance from the farm-house to the boat was two miles by the usual traveled road. But a little sheep path across the farmer's orchards would bring him to the road, only a mile from the boat, and save a quarter' length of his fearful run for life.

Just where the narrow path from the orchard opened into the road, Hetty Martin sat, with her dog Towser, tending the bleaching of the household linen. The long web of forty yards, or more which was diligently spun and woven during the long winter months, was whitened in May and thus made ready for use. This business of bleeching was well economized, being usually done by the younger daughters of the family, who were not old enough to spin, or strong enough for the heavier work of the kitchen and the dairy.

The roll of linen was taken by the farmer or his stout "help" to a grassy plat beside a spring or meadow brook. There it was thoroughly wetted and spread upon the green turf, to take the heat of the sun by day, and the taught in the most thorough and practical manner.

The Spencerian system of Penmanship, is taught by competent and experienced teachers.

Would sit near it during the day, with her knitting on her book, and as fast as the sun dried its folds she would sprinkle the water over it with her gourd-shell dipper, and make it wet its folds she would sprinkle the water over it with her goard-shell dipper, and make it wet

Thus sat Hetty Martin, the younger daugh ter of Gov. Griswold's cousin, when ber hunted friend sprang past her into the road' to escape from his pursuers. Hetty was a timid child of about twelve years, yet thoughtful and wise beyond many of her elders. She was frightened by the headlong haste with which the Governor rushed across the meadow. But she quickly comprehended the scene, and instantly quieted her faithful Towser, who, though a friend of the family guest, thought it becoming to bark loudly at his hurried steps.

Her wise forethought arrested the Governor's notice, and suggested a scheme to delude his pursuers. "Hetty," he said, earnestly, "I am flying for my life, and unless I can reach my boat bfore I am overtaken, I am a lost man. You see the road forks here. Now I want to run down this way to the river. But you must tell the rasculs who are chasing me that I have gone up the road to catch the mail wagon, which will soon be along, you know. Then they will turn off the other way.' "Oh, cousin!" said the little child in an agony of distress, "I cannot tell a lie; indeed I cannot. Why did you tell me which way you were going ?" "Hetty, dear child, sure you would not betray me to my death! Hark! they are coming -I hear the click of their horses' feet. Oh, Hetty, tell them I have gone up the road instead of down, and Heaven will bless you!" "Heaven never blesses" those who speak falsely, cousin. But I will not tell them which way you go, even if they kill me; so run as quickly as possible." "It's no use; unless I can deceive them, I am a dead man." "Cousin, cousin, hide under my web of cloth; they'd never think of looking here for you. Come-get down as swift as you can, and I'll cover you, and stand sprinkling my "It's my only chance, child; I'll get down as you say." And suiting the action to the word the Governor was soon hidden under the folds of the cloth. Angry that their expected prey had escaped from the house where they had hoped to secure him, the six mounted tories, headed by a British officer, dashed along the road in swift pur-

"Child," he said sternly, "have you seen a man running away hereabouts?" "Yes, sir," replied Hetty, trembling and finshing.

"Which way did he go?" "I promised not to tell, sir."

"But you must, or take the consequences." "I said I wouldn't if you kill me;" sobbed the frightened girl. "I'll have it out of her," exclaimed the furious officer, with an oath. "Let me speak to her," said the Tory guide, "I know the child I believe, Isn't your name Hetty Martin?" he asked pleasantly. "Yes. sir."

The service was in Arabic, and rapidly uttered in clear but monotonous tones. The most important part of it seemed to be the Gospel narrative of the marriage at Canaan, in Galilee.

While the priest was reading it, bread and wine was handed to the young man; he gave some to the girl, who in taking it, was very
