few moments afterwards she entered cathedral. There, with his retinue, stood the royal bridegroom, whom she had never before seen. But her glance roved from him to the organ-loft, where she had expected to see the mysterious organist. He was gone, and she was obliged heard that you are in want of an organist, and to return the graceful bow of the King, to whom she had been betrothed from motives of policy. Mechanically she knelt at his side on the altarstone-mechanically listened to the service and made the responses. Then her husband drew her to him in a convulsive embrace, and whis-"Elizabeth, my Queen, my wife, look up !" Trembling in every limb she obeyed. Why did those dark eyes thrill her so ? Why did that smile bring a glow to her cheek? Ah! though the King wore the royal purple, and many a jewelled order glittered on his breast, he seemed the same humble person who had been employed to teach organ music, and had taught her the lore of love. "Elizabeth." murmured the monarch. "Ber him, he sat with his star seeing" gaze fixed on the distant styres timper of which he caught the distant styres timper of which he caught through an own window when there was a stir about the church door, and a royal party came to the altar an unwilling bride. Your father was in the secret." While tears of joy rained from her blue eyes, the new-made Queen returned her husband's fond kiss, and for once two hearts were made happy by a royal marriage.

of the 20th, when Cape Henry appeared in the distance. We passed it about dusk. After a steady calm, and an uninterupted voyage of fifty-six hours, we anchored off Fortress Monroe, about 9 p. m., July 20th, where we lay during the nigh and part of next day. From the wheel-house of the Arago, on the morning of the 21st, the scene around us was bold and enchanting. Old Fort Monros, on our right, with upwards of fifty port-holes frowning grimly upon the waters. The Rip Raps on our left, and the powerful fleet anchored in the harbor, soon convinced us it would puzzle a strong naval force to reduce Old Point Comfort. At twelve o'clock, we drew anchor, and sailed, for New Port News. In order to land, it was necessary for us to be transferred from the Arago to the Catskill, a small transport of light draught, and after a considerable delay we landed at New Port News at 4 o'clock p. m. Before landing. we had the pleasure of seeing the wrecks of the victims of the Merrimac, in the late engagement in Hampton Roads. New Port News is a small insignificant village. No prominent building could be seen to "set off" the rest. We merely marched through the town, and consequently cannot well describe it as it was. We were glad to get out of sight of it. After marching about two miles, we encamped on the eastern bank of James' River. After we had laid down for the night, the weeds around us were so high, and having no tents, a traveller could not have discovered us at 50 yards distance What our future movements may be, I will not venture to prophesy. We are well satisfied with our present situation. Though the weather may be considerably warmer here than in Old Pennsylvania, yet it is free from that dry suffocating and sultry, heat with which the atmosphere of the far South is so heavily ladened in the hot months of summer. Besides that, we have excellent water, which could not be found in South Carolina. It flows in a copious stream from the river's bank, and is just cool enough to be relishable and healthy. Our camp is about 60 or 70 feet above the water level, and from the bank, James River, thickly dotted with our transports and gun boats, spreads out in all of its grandeur before our viow. The River at this point is about three miles wide. The country in this vicinity, is almost wholly uncultivated and overgrown with weeds, of which there is a splendid crop. Our health is fast recruiting, and we will soon be able to take the field, when we will, in all probability go to the aid of Gen. McClellan. Wherever we may be called, the 45th is ready and willing to do its part in the great struggle which is still before us. Let come what will, our cause will eventually triumph. The momentary cheek at Richmond will soon be reretrieved, and McClellan will undoubtedly, ere many days, be in triumphant possession of the rebel Capital. Such is the hope and belief of CHARLESTON RANGER,

"You'll be sure to get the place," exclaimed the sexton. "Why you surpass him thats dead and gone, sir !"

'No, no; you overrate me,' resumed the stranger, with a sad smile; and as if disinclined to peredconversation, he turned from old Hans and began to play again. And now the music changed from a sorrowful strain to a grand old peen, and the mysterious organist,

From the 45th Pennsylvania Regiment. NEWPORT NEWS, VIRGINA, July 23, 1862. FRIEND AGITATOR .- When last I wrote you, we were in the far South expecting daily to be led in battle array against the chivalry of the Palmetto State. Now we are quietly recruiting our drooping energies on the banks of James River, breathing the comparatively cool atmosphere of Virginia.

On the evening of the first of July, while on James Island, we were surprised by an order for our regiment to be prepared to leave the Island at a moment's warning. By 9 o'clock, a. m. next day, the 45th (with the exception of company I, who were left back on picket,) with man at the organ, and heard the melody which all its baggage was on board the "Ben Deford," filled the vast edifice. - Aye, full well she knew for Port Royal, After an unusual pleasant voyage, we landed at Hilton Head, about four o'clock p. m. By the 4th of July, James' Island was totally evacuated by our troops, and left under the care of the gan boats. If they do not drive the enemy from his batteries, they will at least hold him in check, and defend what we have already gained.

On the 9th, our regiment and several others passed in review before Brig. Gen. Williams. We had to march about two miles to the rethe sisle, and moving to the organ loft, paused | viewing ground, and although the heat of the | day had nearly passed, yet the retiring sun poured its scoroling rays upon us with much effect, which, with the thick cloud of dust that There with the light of a lamp suspended to the arose from the sand through which we traveled,

A superintendent of police once made an entry in his register, from which the following is an extract : "The prisoner set upon me, called me an ass, a precious dolt, a scarecrow, a rag-muffin and an idiot-all of which I certify to be true."
