The Legion of H neg.

In 1810-that memorable ear when Rome Amsterdam, Dantzic, Antwerp, and Paris, were cities of the same proud empire-Napeleon had brought his young bride to Brussels, and was received with much enthusiasm and pomp. On the morning after his arrival, he reviewed the troops of the garrison of Al Verie, and as the different regiments passed, remarked a grenadier who bore the chevrops of sergeant major. Tall and erect, his eyes based like stars from a face bronzed by tventy campaigns, which an enormous mourtache sendered still more formidable or bizagre. When the lines were reformed, the emperor rode up to the regiment of grenadiers, and called the sergeant to the front.—The heart of the old soldier beat high, and his cheeks glowed,

"L have seen you before," said Napoleon; "your name?" "Noel, sire," he answered with a faltering

"Were you not in the army of taly?" "Yes, sire; drummer at the Bridge of Arcole."
"And you became sergeant-major."

"At Marengo, sire." "But since?"

"I have taken my share of all the great bat-

He had been distinguished for his bravery in leveral battles, but his modesty had preven echhis soliciting savancement, and he had beer pverlooked in the promotions. The Emperor scalled him to his side.

"You have merited the cress of the Legion of Honor," said he, giving his the one he wore. "You are a brave man,"

The grenadier, who at the moment stood between the Emperor and the Colonel, could not speak, but his eyes said more than volumes. Napoleon made a sign, the drums beat a roll, there was a dead silence, and the Colonel turning toward the new knight, who with trembling hands was placing his cross upon his bresst, said in a loud voice :

"In the name of the Emperor, respect Sergeant-Major Noel as a Sub-Lieugenant in your

An old gentleman who was always bragging bow folks used to work in his younger days, one day challenged his two sons to pitch on a load of hay as fast as he could load it. The challenge was accepted, the hay wagon driven round, and the trial commenced. For some time the old man held his own very creditably, calling out, " More hay! more hay!" Thicker and faster it came. The old man was nearly covered; still he kept crying, "More bay! more hay!" At length, struggling to keep on the top of the ill-arranged beap, it began firet to roll, then to slide, and at last off it went from the wagon, and the old man with it.-"What are you down for ?" cried the boys. "I came down after hay !" answered the old man stoutly.
