FROM A TIOGA BOY. STAFFORD, VA., 61st Reg't O. V., January 2, 1863.

EDITOR AGITATOR: Having lately made a trip to Fredericksburg, I concluded to drop you a few lines. I started on the 30th December and returned the same day. Did not have much time to spare. I rode down and watered my mule in the Rappahannock. The rebel pickets near on the opposite side of the river, ours on this side, and Fredericksburg in their possession. They are so close that they converse with each other, and our pickets have traded it n sugar and coffee for whiskey and toback. They seem very friendly and remarked to one of our pickets that if the privates of each side were to get together this war would be ended in three days, and our now unhappy country would be one of peace. I saw the rebels out a drill. Many of them have our clothes on-slould judge they took pride in drilling in our sight as I am told. shey come out there every (a) to drill. I also saw what I supposed to be is rebel general riding about the forts and affic pits, as he had a large body guard and see and to be inspecting the works of his rebel creys. The place is well fortified and I should think there was a large force by the looks of the smoke rising from their camps. I then wide up to Falmouth. The river there is so low that a person can cross on the stones without wetting his feet. I learned that the Pennsylvania Reserves were in that vicinity, but it was getting late in the day and I had yet nine miles to ride so I did not see them. I regretted it ve y much, for I would like to have spent an I ar with my Wells boro volunteers.

The Holidays were sport in Sigel's Corps very quietly. Many of our good German soldiers missed their lager beer and pretries, say. ing nothing of the crout that would have disappeared in swi mineuts. New Year's day I concluded I would have a good dinner that I appeared in swi mineuts. New Year's day I concluded I would have a good dinner that I might remember one holiday in war time. So his effice over WRIGHT'S FLOUR AND FRED with my gun at a right shoulder shift, I start STORE, where he will continue to de all kinds of ed for some good old secesh farmer with a work requisition in my gun and very close to the powder. After traveling for one hour toward the Potomac and across the fields I halted and paid a visit to the poultry yard of the rebel farmer. Chickens and pigs were scarce, could MARINUS N. ALLEN. A. There was a little skirm sh at Dumfries a few days ago, two companies of the 61st were taken prisoners but were soon retaken. The rebels got rather the werst of the bargain, our chaplain and sutler were also taken and we have not heard anything from them. FROM THE BUCK-TAILS. [Extences from a letter from Capt. Hugh McDonald.]

January 4, 1863. We arrived in front of the city on the morning of the 11th ult., the first gun was fired at 51 o'clock, it was the beaviest cannonading I ever heard, 200 pieces firing all day. On the 12th ultimo we crossed the river, the Bucktails went on picket that night, our pickets and the rebel pickets were in sight of each other all hight. At 9 o'clock the next morning we were relieved and advanced as skirmishers. We were prevented by their line of skirmishers from making any advance. Every inch was contested by the rebals. At 11 clock our batteries commenced shelling the woods but without success. At 2 o'clock the charge was ordered. The reserve was on the left of the left grand division. The order was given to Gen: leade to charge the woods in front. Gen. Birtly with his division to support. Had this been done we would have carried the wools. But instead, Birney never moved, consequently the reserve had to fight it alone and were all cut to pieces. We were in the fight 10 bours— in the charge. As we advanced in the charge the fire was terrific, and our men felt fa The rebels fired grape, canister, shells, railra d iron, and parts relieved and advanced a skirmishers. We were prevented by their line of skirmishers from grape, canister, shells, railra d iron, and parts of plough shares. Finally we reached the railroad about 35 rods from, their batteries. We kept up our fire 11 hours, but no support coming, were obliged to fall back, leaving the most of our dead in the hands of the rebels. Our less is 210. We went on the field with 310 and have 100 left. The loss in company G was 23. We started with 31 officers and men. When we rallied, I found myself in command of what was left. There was one officer known to have been killed in the regiment, Lieut. Wm. B. Jenkins (Co. C.). Wounded, Captains Taylor and Irwin, and Lieut. McNaughton.

I was ordered on this bank of the river without any shelter from the fire of the enemy. I studied for a moment what to do. I finally ordered the pieces of companies to dig rifle pits. We were placed on the bank at midnight and at daylight the pite were done and the men in them. In the morning they saw the Yankees had retreated. About 2 o'clock they crept up where we were concealed in the pits, but we could not fire, for as soon as the men placed could not fire, for as soon as the men placed Is an important link in the great chain of National their rifles over the pits to fire they saw the Mercantile Colleges, located in the following Cities glimmer of the barrels in the sun and fell back, but when the sun ceased to be their ally the marderous fire of our rifles caused them to
