

THE REBELS IN DESPAIR.

A Cry of Distress from Richmond—A Hundred Thousand Men Immediatly of the Rebels are Lost.

A remarkable editorial article appears in the Richmond Examiner of January 20, which declares that unless a hundred thousand men are at once added to the rebel army of the southwest the game of the traitors is up. We copy: "It is not altogether an empty boast on the part of the Yankees that they hold all they have ever held, and that another year or two of such progress as they have already made will find them masters of the Southern Confederacy. They who think independence is to be achieved by brilliant but inconsequential victories, would do well to look with the natural eye at the magnitude of Yankee possession in our country. Maryland, Kentucky and Mississippi are claimed as constituent parts of the Confederation; they are as much in the power of Lincoln as Maine and Minnesota. The pledge, once deemed foolish by the South, that he would 'hold, occupy and possess' all the forts belonging to the United States government, has been redeemed almost to the letter by Lincoln. Forts Pickens and Morgan we still retain, but with these exceptions, all the strongholds on the seaboard, from Fortress Monroe to the Rio Grande, are in the hands of the enemy.

Very consoling and very easy to say that it was impossible to prevent all this, and that the occupation of the outer edge of the Republic amounts to nothing. Dreyer's Bluff and Vicksburg gives the lie to the first assertion, and the onward movement of Rosecrans towards Alabama, the presence of Grant in north Mississippi, and of Curtis in middle Arkansas say nothing of Banks at New Orleans and Baton Rouge, set at rest the silly dream that a thin strip of sea coast only is in the possession of our foes. The truth is, the Yankees are in great force in the very heart of the Confederacy; they swarm on all our borders, they threaten every important city yet belonging to us, and nearly two hundred thousand of them are within two days march of the Confederate capital. This is no fiction. It is a fact so positive, that none can deny it.

"Nor is this all. The President (Davis) tells us, in his message, that the troubles with the Indian tribes have been removed, and no further difficulty is anticipated. The intelligence we obtain from private and trustworthy sources does not confirm the President's sanguine assertions. The trouble with the Chickasaws was, in great part, due to the fact that some seven or eight thousand of them, now in arms, had not received a cent of pay for fourteen months. It is true that paper money has been sent to them, and ere now it is to be hoped has reached its destination. But Indians do not like paper money.

In Arkansas General Hindman is very far from being a favorite, even among his own people, and so destitute are some of the new levies who have volunteered to come out of Missouri to join our armies, that whole battalions of them have been sent marching barefoot through snow three inches deep. Add to this the fact that, so far as the public is permitted to know, New Mexico and Arizona are, at the time being, lost to us, and that the state of disaffection in Tennessee and Mississippi (growing out of the appointment of incompetent officers and the fancied neglect of that country by the Confederate government—not from any lack of fervor in the cause), which President Davis's visit was intended to heal, is likely to revive under the depressing influence of Bragg's retreat and his continuance in command—add all this to the foregoing, and it will be seen the Yankees have much to encourage them in the prosecution of the war, and the less to little to excite serious apprehensions as to the future.

"The remedy for this state of things is obvious. It lies in the extension and rigid enforcement of that law to which we owe our salvation. We must bring out the conscripts and diminish exemptions. If this is done the chapter of failures in the Southwest will come to an end.

"Able-bodied men must not be allowed to stay at home on the pretext of attending to twenty negroes. Here in Virginia there are, in many places, contiguous plantations, numbering in the aggregate hundreds of slaves, without a solitary white man left to guard them. The gentle authority of ladies has been found amply sufficient to control the obedient African population.

"With the first opening of spring comes the last tremendous shock of this war. Many of the Yankee troops are nine months' men. More are enlisted for two years, their time expiring in May next. Up to that time they will be available, and we may be very sure that all the fighting that can possibly be gotten out of them will be had before they are allowed to go home. They outnumber us two to one. There is a limit to the endurance of the brave men at Vicksburg, Grenada and Vicksburg. They must be sustained, strengthened, reinforced. If within the next two months we do not add seventy-five or a hundred thousand men to our forces in the Southwest we shall come to grief. If we do add them, we are safe beyond peradventure, and next summer will witness the final triumph of our arms."

THE INSOLENT YANKEES.—The Richmond papers are given to the indulgence of their spleen against Yankees. They are almost as severe upon them as the Northern Democrats are toward the original hive. The following estimate of the Yankee character is from the Richmond Whip. It is to be observed that when there speaks of the Yankees, they mean the whole North: "We have committed many errors in our treatment of the Yankees. Not the least has been in regarding them as something better than they really are. They are by nature venal, and fitted only for menial duties. They are in open and flagrant insurrection against their natural lords and masters, the gentlemen of the South. In the exercise of their assumed privileges, they deport themselves with all the extravagant airs, the insolence, the cruelty, the cowardice and love of rapine, which has ever characterized the revolts of slaves. The former leniency of their masters only serves to aggravate the ferocity of their natures. When they are again reduced to subserviency, and taught to know their place, we must take care to put such trammels about them that they will never have an opportunity to play these tricks again."
