[Advertigement.] THE PROPOSED NEW RAILBOAD.

The argument in favor of the new Railroad, drawn rom the supposed advantages which Tioga county is to derive from it, is that most commonly used by Mr. Magee and his friends, and, perhaps, deserves further notice. If the county is to be benefitted by it, let us endeavor to see how. Its friends answer us by saying that the building of the road will make a large amount of business in the valley of the Tioga while it is building. That it will give a new impetus to business generally in the county; and that it will built some eight or nine miles of new road in the county, and no business was advanced by it except Mr. Magee's own. He builds a railroad in the cheapest way for himself. He employs his hands, brings his provisions from New York for them, and fornishes them goods out of his own store. Not a merchant is helped by it-not a farmer sells a bushel of wheat more or less in consequence of it. This also disposes of the third benefit, viz: "home market." But will Mr. Magee mine more coal if he gets his charter than he will if he does not? In either case he will mine all he can sell to advantage, or all that his mines can be made to yield profitably. In either case he will the AGITATOR whose sidescriptions were in arrents six have the same number of miners employed, and consequently in either case there will be the same "home settle the same with two present proprietor of the market." The new road, therefore, will neither help

But it is said that will give an impetus to busines. generally. How? No more coal will be mined-no ore miners at work in mining it-no more men to be fed and clothed. It could not help business if it was otherwise, for Mr. Magee furnishes his own dry goods and groceries at his own store. But let us take a practical view of this question from another stand-point. It is a fact beyond all cavil that the present road does do'all the business that both reads would have to do, and is capable of doing much more.

Now what is the uniform effect of dividing a business none too large to go together? A man keens a hotel and has a comfortable business. Soon, some neighbor, moved by a desire to injure the landlord. or it may be with the expectation of getting rich, erects a rival house. The building of another house and the consequent doubling of the accommodations, does not double the custom. That remains as before, and divided between the two is really worth nothing to either, while to either alone it would afford a comfortable living. It is so in every branch of business. Until there is a public demand for it—an increased business to require it—the building of

His settached to the table like a sewing bird, and having no tension, and requiring no lubrication or change of stitch, is always ready for operation, and such a marvel of simplicity that a child of six or eight years can understand and use it auccessfully.

It is not at all liable to get out of order.

Each machine is not un in a past how accompany does not double the custom. That remains as besion flag, thrust it into her bosom and defied some ford a comfortable living. It is so in every branch good looking Union boys to take it. But, to her of business. Until there is a public demand for it an increased business to require it—the building of the new road would only serve to divide the business nied with full and explicit directions, and twenty which the present road can and ought to do. Instead five needles. The Mobile party quote country butter at of building up the country it would be a positive detriment, because it would render the general busiof building up the county it would be a positive ness of the road comparatively worthless to each of that either could do with the whole.

This is perfectly obvious. The real motive of Mr. Magee is very different from what men are asked to believe. He does not come into Tioga county to pestage. Address, spend his money for the benefit of a people who are strangers to him. He has no such broad philanthropic purposes in view as are glibly talked of by his friends. He comes into the county for the simple the speediest manner possible. He owns the lower end of the present road. His mines are at the other end. If he could get his new road he could carry on it all there is to be carried over the route. By refusing to take freights over his road from the State line down (as he then could do with impunity) which CARD.—They ascriber desires to acknowledge line down (as he then could do with impunity) which with many thanks the the ful visits and liberal do- had come to that point in the cars of the Tioga comnations of the peopli of Wellsbore, recently made at | pany, he could at once compel everybody to patronize the numerous guests to his house and to their bomes | the whole length of the Tioga railroad useless. That again, he feels under especial obligations. Earnestly company, which expended money in building the praying that he may be the means of reciprocating road—which developed the mineral wealth of the these favors in imperishable blessings to you all, not county, and which has given to the county all the excepting the childhin. he is happy to subscribe him- benefits which it can ever derive from a railroad up the Tioga valley—that company will be ruined. No man in the county-no man in the State, will be benefitted by it. John Magce, and he only, will be the gainer. He asks the people to help him forward to this result. Can any fair-minded man do it?
