2.3. We have been though a private letter written by a Bucktail, a meister of Capt. Niles' Company, da-ted-Camp near Fairfer Adurt House, March 5, 1863, from which we are permitted to make the following extract:

"There is one thing that I cannot pass by. I see that a correspondent of the Bunner, writing from this place says that : 'On the last move of the army of the Potomac, the Rebels half a board stuck up on the other sule of the river with this inscription thereos :' other sube of the river with this inscription thereon : Barnside stuck in the mid.' This is a downright fulschood, for I was an the 'front myself, and there was not to be seen one rebel or the signs of one, and the person that wrote that letter and had it pub-lished in the Banner, washes much as two miles back in the rear, where he is is ways to be found. Specimens of Copperhead Democracy.

At the late State Convention of the Copperhead Democracy in Hartford, a brawler by the name of W. W. Eaton ejected his venom in this style :--- this style:--"Some of the opposition papers would howl, to-morrow, had 'cry 'copperhead and traitor.' But this cry was softening. Public sentiment had undergone a change within a few months. The doings of this Convention will awaken lively emotions in the South. He had never lost sight of his friends there. The resolutions we have adopted will cause a thrill in the hearts of our Southern brethren. Thomas H. Seymour of our Southern brethren. Thomas II. Seymour is a man whom the brave men and lovely women of the South love, honor, and esteem. The conservative men of the North will grasp the demon abolition by the throat, strangle it, and invite our brethren at the South to unite with us." "The speeches before the Convention were Y. Evangelist. Cotton Smith, of Sharon, said the Administration was responsible for the war. Alvan P. Hyde, who was trying to bid a place in Congress away from W. W. Eaton, said Congress was attempting to change the Government to a despotism, and that the Administration pre-he 'would kill him, damn him! Eaton said the war was 'a crusade against a portion of this country and its institutions.' 'We are called copperheads,' he said ; 'I tell you the time has come when we will rattle before we strike! and I tell you now that the Democratic party is preparing to spring at the throat of this tyranny that is crushing us !'
