How Turpentine and Tar are Made.

The immense forests in North Carolina, which covor the sandy ridges between the swamps and water-courses, consist almost wholly of the long-leafed pine, the plaus palustris of the Southern States, From then is gathered one of the great staples of North Carolina-the turpentine. These trees at maturity are seventy or eighty feet high, and their trunks eighteen or twenty feet in diameter near the base. They grow close together, very straight, and without branches to two third; of their height. Overhead, their interlocking crowns form a continous shady capopy; while beneath, the ground is covered with a thick, yellow matting of pine straw-clean, dry, level, and unbroken by undergrowth. The privilege of tapping the trees is generally farmed out by the land-owner, at a stated price per thousand, about from twenty to thirty dollars. Under this privilege the laborer commences his operations. During the winter he chops deep notches into the base of the tree, a few inches from the ground, and slating inward. Above, to the hight of two or three feet, the surface is scallfied by chipping off the bark and outer good. From this surface the resinous sap begins to flow about the middle of March, at first ver ! slowly, but more rapidly during the heir of the summer, and slowly again as winter a prosches. The liquid turpentine run's into the notches or boxes; as they are technically called, each holding from a quart to half a gallon. This, as it gather, is dipped out with a wood in spoon, barreled, and carried to market, where it commands the highest price. That which oozes out and hardens apon the scarified surface of the tree is scraped down with an iron instrument into a hod, and is sold at an inferior price. Every year the process of scarifying is carried two or three feet higher up the trunk, until it reaches as high as a man can conveniently reach with his long handled cutter. When this ceases to yield, the same process is commenced on the opposite side of the trunk. An average annual yield is about twenty-five barrels of turpentine from a thousand trees, and it is estimated that one man will dip ten thousand boxes.

The trees at length di | under these repeated operations. They are then felled, split and burned for tar. The dead trees are, preferred for this purpose, because when life ceases, the resinous matter conceptrates in the interior layers of the wood. In building a tar kitn a small circular mound of earth is first raised, declining from the circi ofference to the center, where a cavity is formed, communicating by a conduit with a shallow d toh tarrounding the mound. Upon this foundation the split sticks are stacked to the hight of ten or twelve feet. The stack is then covered with earth as in making charcoal, and the fire applied through an opening in the top. As, this continues to burn with a smoldering hea, the wood is charred, and the tar flows into 'he cavity in the center, and thence by the cons dit into vessels sunk to receive it.

THE RIGHT WAY TO PREPARE WOOD FOR FUEL. -Water will not burn read ly, neither will the sap of any kind of wood t irs, even tolerably well. Therefore, in order o get the greatest amount of heat from wood; the amount must be all dried out of it. The best and most economical manner of doing this will give us some correct ideas about, the true way of preparing wood for fuel.

At whatever season of the year wood is cut, it should be split immediately, and piled up under a shelter that will protect it from rain and snow. This shelter should be open on the sides. so that the sir, may circulate freely through the entire pile of wood. Then as soon as any moisture evaporates from the wood it will be carried away, and if the roof does not leak, the wood will se in become thoroughly dry, and will burn like inder.

There is almost as much economy to be exarcised in curing wood is there is in caring for ears, and authorized by Act of Congress, approved February 25, 1862. a great amount of gum, sigar and starch, The COUPON BONDS are issued in sums of $50, ercised in curing wood is there is in curing which if dried quickly, will burn well and produce much heat; whereas if it be allowed to become partially dry, and then to become wet again, the vitality of the wood will become very much injured, just as hay will be injured by being exposed to the influences of rain and sunshine. And when the wood is piled in a close wond-house, where the air cannot circulate freely, it will become sap soaked and dead, and will not burn, many times, as well as green wood. The sooner wood can be split into small sticks and piled up under an airy shelter, the better it will be for fuel.

THE ADVANTAGE. - Two gentlemen, Mr. D. and Mr. L. stood candidates for a star in the Legislature of New York. They were violent-ly opposed to each others. By none at lice Mr. B. gained the cleation. When he was re-turning home much clated. with success, he met a gentleman, an acquaintance of his? "Well," says D., "I have got the election

L. was no match for me. I'll tell you how I flung him. If there happend any Dutch voters I could talk Dutch with them-and there I had the advantage of him. If there was any Frenchman, I could ta'k French with themand there I had the advantage of him. But as to L., he was a clever, honest, sensible lit. tle fellow."

"Yes, sir," replied the gentleman, "and there he had the advantage of you."

QUEER CALCULATION .- A cubic yard of gold is worth 2,000,000 of English pounds, or ten millions of dollars. On this basis it is calculated that all the gold above ground in the world might be put into a cellar 24 feet square and 16 feet deep; all the product of California and Australia might go into an iron sale nine feet square. Nevertheless, there is a great deal of pulling and hauling after what little there is scattered about.

ARPLY REWARDED .- In France the society for the protection of animals does not enjoy the proper respect which it deserves, the "wite" of the capital indulging in an endless variety of jokes at its expense. The last bon mot is to this effect :

A countryman armed with a club, presents himself before the President of the society, and claims the first prize. He is asked to describe the act of humanity on which he founded his claim.

"I have saved the life of a wolf," replied the countryman with sang froid " I might easily have killed him with this bludgeon," and he swung his weapon in the air, to the immense discomfort of the President.

But where is the wolf?" inquired the latter ; " what had he done to you ?" "He had just devoured my wife," was the Following some men whom he tho't bound on the same voyage, he found himself in what he took to be the pit, but it happened to be in a meeting house, and the minister was preaching udon the text wherein is mentioned the sheep and the goats, and in order to make impression upon his congregation he put the significant question, "Who would, wish to be a goat?" and paused, and then with still greater emphatis asked, " Who will be a goat?". DR. FRANKLIN SAYS:

"When you have anything to advertise, tell the public of it in plain, simple language." I am manufacturing good custom made Boots and Shoes which I will sell at fair prices, and only for READY PAY. Such work cannot be sold at as low rates per pair as eastern made slop-work, but it can and will be sold at prices which will enable the par-chaser to protect his feet with good substantial boots more cheaply than with a poor slop-shop article, which, even if it chances not to fall in pieces with the first weeks service, is but a doubtful protection in first weeks service, is but a doubtful protection in wet and cold weather.
