In union is strength; and not strength only, but peace, stability, influence, prosperity and all kindred blessings. It animates to good fellowship and renders burdens light, unitedly, which separately, would be crushing. Without it, we have secession, rebellion, war, and all their attendant evils. Not only is national union attended with all these aids to civilization, and its reverse, with a calamitous train of frightful evil, but the same holds good of the principle in any application. Union is the very soul and secret of military, success. Armies without the saving ceraent of mity, are broken and scattered to the four winds. So also, with any locally social and charitable, or national undertaking, "United, we stand; divided we fall" Instinct even without the aid of reason, declares the truth of this. Sound common sense points out the great mistake of disunited policies, where deep and lasting interests are inseparably united. Look at the present and conditions of the German States, if an instance is wanted: where every effort to throw off a hated and sectional thralldom, and rise in all the grandeur of national majesty, is defeated by the distinitied policies of petty principalities. For the sake of every noble principle dear to humanity, let, us not must go on; it must be fought on and fought out, until we conquer such a peace as shall banish all recurrence of wares. We must establish a policy of unity, against and in spite of all odds and policies which glare but upon us like an ignis fatuis from the dark instability or inordinate ambition of this or that part of the people.

But only second in importance to the brave defense of our union, by our armies, are the united and magnanimous efforts of thousands of our loyal people, to allay disease, sooth the sufferings and save the lives of those brave defenders. A firm conviction of the great good and grand economy of the Union, animates every truly loyal breast, and it pne of our highest justifications in pursuing the war. Most assuredly then, the same cor viction shall animate us in all we do for those who have marched out, with their lives in their hands, to sustain and perpetuate the glorious rights and principles of a great good and free government. There is ample work in all home hands to do-but how can we bes do it? By sustaining and aiding the Sanisary Commission. For in this, we have the advattage, not only of exact method, system, care and supervision; but the extended and unerging certainty of united effort.

Many good and benevolers projects fall to the ground through the want of a systemized plan in carrying them out. We all know something of this. The present, is not our first experience in Aid Societies; but it is our first, upon the right basis—in confunction with the Sanitary Commission. Last year and previously societies were formed a nong us, and the general and willing energy and liberality, reflect credit upon the hands and hearts of all. But many of those useful and needed articles, so freely and generously given, failed entirely to reach their destination; as me were lost and others sent to a more distant, part of the country than that intended. The result of those praiseworthy efforts, has been to discourage some, and render others credulous and suspicious of the feasibility of any plan for the relief of our sick and wounded soldiers. But such, is disbelief in the face of the most conclusive evidence. Articles thus miscarried, manifestly failed through the lack of organization, which should guard them on their way and ensure their delivery. The Sanitary Commession is an organized body, governed by the most rigid and business-like method: and this method is as full and as nearly complete as intelligent energy, experience, and sagacity can make it. I can safely ven are the assertion, that not one gift is misarplied or one item lost, that watchfulness, care and honesty can Stronge as it may seem there are those, with such littleness of soul, that they find objections to this humane undertaking, on the score of loss and wants. Well, we are told too, that crows will pull up corn; and we may reasonably suppose if it they will. The farmer plants his crop, an seo well assured is he of the thieving propensit of this not classical bird that he puts a fe'v scare-crows here and there with his corn; by i nevertheless, the crow, setting aside the judg tent of some men, can tell a man from a m mmy, and swoops down on the broad corn field and appropriates a few hills to his own us h. But should the apprehension of this ungentlemanly conduct on the part of the crow, det r. the farmer from planting his crop? Why, pertainly not; he should plant all the more.

Just so with the army crow. But let us be honestly charitable and blieve that, as the pilfering birds are few, at I closely watched among us, so are their pricotypes among our

The Commission are not in the habit of employing "dupes" or "scalecrows" to fright sway the vultures—but living being, blood and bone specimens of live agerts, drilled to their business and able to tell a hoax from reality, or a substance from its shadow. We should be too exacting to say there should not be the . least loss by wastage, war, and tear. Any business, conducted on the strictest method, unavoidably incurs a small loss. The fact that a certain amount of waste sinevitable, should furnish no more reasonable ground for objecttion, or relaxed effort, than for a poor man to forswear all labor for the support of his family, and keep his feet of tetantly suspended from the ground, because, h boots would wear

We have state agencies and lesser societies, acting independently; and hough in many instances accomplishing much good, and afford-ing great relief, they are attended with some chilling and checking infit nees, which result from the distinctions they nake. Too great a degree of local and sectional affection, operates against a high and lot y patriotism, with broad views, embracing the whole country within its encircling arms. 'The natural to cherish the warmest feelings for our own State, and our own Soldiers; but in ti al times like these. all differences, distinctions, barriers, lines and parties should know no rife-all should be merged into one great, comn an, equal and united footing, and that shilld be National.
While yet with us, they are cour soldiers, they are Pennsylvania soldiers while within our immediate reach, they are lacelly ours; but when called to join that griss bost which fight our countrys battles, they b llong to the Nation

When the soldier sickens, he cannot be cared for by our State people. His is in a Federal hospital, We do not know where he is. Our Governor does not know there he is; often

٠. ٠. ۲

When he falls in the front he is carried to the rear and sent to some Hospital, or perhaps he may be left on the field. But in either case, the agents of the Commission are sure to reach him if human exertion can doit; and with healing in their bands, they pour oil into his stiffened wounds, and a "God bless you" trembles on his faltering tongue. Let us not help on this great cause in the spirit of a "Forlorn hope," but as one full of promise, towards which our affections should warmly cling and ripen. Each fire-side may have a vacant place, or if not, it may soon be so : but sympathy for all suffering should be a sufficient motive.

I cannot persuade myself that this subject should need argument, to claim it attention. Let its statement be its argument.
