until 9 p. m., encamped for the night. We should doubtless have marched much farther that night had it not been for a terrific thunder storm, which not only completely drepched us to the skin, but the darkness, only as it was broken by the lurid lightning, became so great that it was impossible to proceed farther. During the storm several soldiers were struck by lightning and instantly killed. Next day our march was resumed and continued with all possible vigor until Friday at 4 p. m., when we came upon the enemy near the State Lunatic Asylum, 13 miles from the city of Jackson. At 41 p. m., July 10th, our regiment was deployed as skirmishers and ordered to advance supported by our division commanded by Gen. Welsh in line of battle. Between us and the enemy's line was one of those large fields of corn for which this part of the State is celebrated, and the rail road. The line of the enemy which proved to be cavalry, steed firm, until considering "discretion the better part of valor," took to the woods near by. On we went after them through the woods expecting every moment to run upon them. It was nearly dark and yet no enemy had been found to dispute our progress when the right of our line came upon his (the enemy's) pickets.— Having discovered his position we were ordered to right wheel which brought us face to face with the foe. At 10 p. m., we lay down on our arms and slept until morning within about 100 yards of the enemy's pickets. Next morning at early dawn we were ordered to advance We were just ascending the brow of a hill when a volley of musketry and the ominous sound of whistling bullets warned us to lay low. We returned the compliment, and firing soon became general along the lines. The enemy's skirmishers had the advantage of us, being under cover of woods while we were ex-posed in the open field. The weather being exiremely hot, rendered our position still more uncomfortable. After skirmishing until 11 a. m., having expended all four ammunition and driven the enemy into his rifle pits, we were relieved by the 36th Mass. The great wonder among others was how we had occupied so exposed a position and sustained no great loss. Every man did his duty. Among the killed are some of our best men. [Their names were

It seemingly not being the intention of our Generals to bring on a general engagement, none but skirmishers with proper support were thrown forward. Firing with musketry and artillery on both sides was constant and sometimes quite brick. Several solid shot fired by the enemy passed through the upper story of the Asylum to the bewilderment and consternation of its nomerous, unfortunate inmates. On Sunday morning we were relieved from duty at the immediate front by the 2d Division of our corps. Sunday afternoon was comparatively quiet. Monday morning the ball opened briskly on both sides and continued throughout the day. At 1 a.m., one Tuesday, a heavy detail of our regiment was sent to the front.-For twenty four hours we lay in reserve, the next twenty-four were spent in the rifle pits dug for the protection of our skirmishers; our only duty being to hold our position while Sherman maneuvred to surround the city, should Johnston give him time. On Wednesday afternoon the Rebals sent over a flag of truce asking for a cessation of hostilities for a few hours, in order to pary their dead. On Thursday another flag of truce came over.— Both were accepted. The enemy made several desperate charges on our right and were repulsed with great slaughter. Thursday morning we were relieved and took no further part in the conflict. Thursday afternoon was unusually still; Friday morning all was quiet.

News soon spread through camp that Jackson was evacuated, the stey had flown. The second division of our curps under Gen. Potter was the first to enter the town. We took about 300 prisoners, some voluntarily giving themselves up, while many were found papping being questioned all agreed in saying that Johnston's army consists of about 30,000, mostly conscripts, but that he bould not muster more than 20,000 effective reliable men. Our cavalry was sent in puranit, to harass his rear, and if possible, completely rout him before he can make a stand. He is by this time out of the State, leaving the great Mississippi Valley clear of all the enemies of the U.S. The for-tifications around Jackson were formidable as far as they went, there being but one line and that immediately around the town. The houses were nearly all deserted, except by here and there a faithful negro. Many of them were ransacked by the soldiers and much property carried away or destroyed. Since then the city has been nearly all destroyed, and railroad communication all out. After assisting in cutting the railroad, our corps being relieved from further duty in this department, was marched to our old camp in rear of Vicks burg, where we are availing transportation to convey us to our new field of action.

Young America. Death of General Welsh.

Brigadier General THOMAS WELSE comman ding 1st Division 9th Army Corps, died in Cincinnati on the evening of the 14th inst. from disease contracted during the sampaign before Vicksburg and in purshit of Johnston.

At the commencement of the Rebellion GEN. Second Pennsylvania olunteers, from his native town, Columbia, Pa. He was soon afterward elected Lientenant Colonel of the regiment. At the expiration of the three months' service he was appointed to the columlicy of the Forty-fifth Penncylvania Regiment, with which he served in South Carolina, and afterward under General Burnside, in the Ninth Army Corps, the greater part of the time in command of a brigade. He commanded a brigade at the battles of South Mountain and Antietam, in both of which engagements he distinguised himself, and won the reccommendation of Generals Be naide. Parks and Wilcox, which produced him promotion to the rank of Brigadier General at the close of the last session of Congress.

As a soldier, General Welsu has always served with distinction, commanding obedience and attracting affectionate regard from all under him. As a men, he was true in every sense of the word!

TRUE DEMOCRACY. There cannot be true democracy while tression keeps its armies in the held, except war Democracy. The office hunters, who at at a time like this preach peace, peace, in the North, may be Democrats in name, but in reality they are torics and traitors, who would be in arms against their Government were they living in the so-called Confederacy.—Louisville Demovrat.

WEDNESDAY, :::: , AUGUST 26, 1863.

UNION STATE TICKET. FOR GOVERNOR, ANDREW G. CURTIN.

FOR JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT, DANIEL AGNEW OF BEAVER COUNTY.

Republican Co. Convention, Aug. 28th.

THE Copperhead papers are trying to pin the loyalty of Woodward upon the sleeves of his sons, in the army. Having two sons in the Union army, they argue that he must be loyal. Very good; that is average Copperhead logic, which we meet and squelch thus: John J. Crittenden, now dead, had two sons in the rebel army; therefore was Mr. Crittenden a traitor. That would be conclusive to a copperhead but it does not convince us.

The fact is, Judge Woodward must be prov ed loyal out of his own mouth, or not at all. A man arraigned for felony cannot put the good character of his children in evidence to raise a presumption of innocence. Oh, no!

BY THEIR RECORD.

Two things no man can escape-Death, and hia RECORD.

As men sow, they reap. There is no escape from the consequences of wrong-doing. The secret plotter of, and sympathizer with treason cannot hide from the consequences of his wickedness. Acts may be done in the darkness, but the consequences reveal themselves in the broad glare of noon.

It is well known, and seldom if ever denied that the faction which now champions Seymour in New York, Woodward in this State, and Vallandigham in Ohio, did their utmost to discourage enlistments last summer, and have done their utmost to the same end since that time. The intention was to cripple the Government in the prosecution of the war. Base as that intention was, it did not fail of its ef-

It did not fail. It succeeded so well that it was found necessary last fall to raise men by draft. That draft being made under State law, the time of service was limited to nine months. Therefore an Act of Congress was found necessary, under which an effective army could be organized. Under such an Act the present draft is being made. And however disagreeable, or inconvenient, or hard to endure it may prove to the arms bearing population, let each and every man remember that but for the discouragement of enlistments, and the constant aid and comfort afforded the rebels in arms by the Copperhead leaders, the necessity for the present draft, as well as for that of last year, never could have existed. For the draft, friends, we have to thank the Copperhead leaders in the loyal States.

loan of $20,000. Since then we have conversed with many of our prominent citizens, who preliminary to the negociation of that loan, the Government. Read and ponder. which facts render the record referred to severhouses or in the woods near by. On al shades darker. It seems that the putting of this loan upon the market was earnestly urged upon the Commissioners by prominent citizens the list of subscribers; nor does it appear that townships: he used any of his very extensive influence to procure subscriptions from his political associates. It is by the two-facedness of such men Number enrolled, 443. Number drawn, 135. that the Government finds itself obliged to institute Conscription to fill up its armies. And impartial history will fix whatever of odium may attach to the process, upon them.

And this class of politicians, encouraged by their success in having brought two drafts upon the country, are now doing their utmost to fan the flames of discontent, and otherwise to force the Government to make another draft. Such baseness may well exceed belief; but it reeks into an offensive existence in all the length and breadth of the north. Will men see this baseness and avoid it as they would shun-the pollution of hell?

THE people of the loyal States are now to be weighed the balance. The man who loves his country because it has heretofore required of him no more than the annual taxes, and who now creeps behind his shadow, or his avarice will occupy the scale that kicks the beam.

Like the man who complained of his dependent and infirm mother, that she had "outlived ber usefulness," is he who begrudges service or money to his country in its extremity.

Show us a man who is willing to present himself before an enlightened and critical posterity in the balance that kicks the beam, and we will show you a man who has not cultivated a healthy self-respect; a man who exists. thinks, and feels, only skin-deep.

It is in sickness, and in the straits of misfortune that the mother clings most fondly to her children. When they suffer, she flies to their relief. In danger, she bastens to encir. cle them, and hedge them about with the all sacrificing majesty of maternal love. She would give her life for her children.

What should we say of the child of such a mother, if, when bowed with years and broken with the cares and anxieties which cluster around the mother's pathway, he should minister to her barest needs grudgingly; and when her existence was trembling in the balance, should go to her aid with bitter complaints and lamentations about broken rest and wasted Velie, Patrick Hart, F. You would despise, ay, utterly scorn such a monster of ingratitude. You would avoid him -you would hold him up to your children as an evil example. You would call him a devil.

ernment to the citizen. What the ingrate boy is to the distressed mother, is the grumblingcitizen to the Government, now struggling for existence against the powers of an organized ingratitude as black as Night.

If any man in the North is anything to-day, schools where he obtained his bookish education; its policy has covered the sea with merchant ships which created our seaboard tradecause the pioneer to hew down the forest, the farmer to plant and sow, and the broad land to ripple with golden harvests. These are some ungrudged protection of the Government.

Now who so base as to begrudge a requital of this beneficence, either in service or in its equivalent, when the benefactor requires it?

much it may evershadow his pleasant places.

We shall hear grumbling and unmanly complaint from the enemies of the Government. And there are eneaking traitors who will look for those cases where the blow falls most heavily, and where the sacrifice is great, and by base insignations, and lies, will endeavor to aggravate the blow, and to prejudice the minds of the conscripted against the Government.

We all understand how certain this is to be done, and by whom it is to be done. The very existence of Copperheadism depends on the practice of fraud and the dissemination of lies. objects of that faction, left to make its impress. Wm. H. Braine, George Bliss, Uriah Thomas, ion without note or comment, would blast that Joseph Kilpatrick, Rev. Florence McCarty, W. traitorous faction as certainly as the untimely frost blasts the growing corn. But its leaders Dribler, Robert Abefnathy, James Dunsmore, cloak their treason under a specious pretence Amos Shaffer, Alouzo L. Johnson, Christian fabric of truth disappears altogether.

THE nomination of Curtif & Agnew seems to fire every loyal heart in the North. Governor Curtin is emphatically the popular man. He has a friend wherever you find a man who has a soldier-son. He is a tried man. No man Covington Borough. can show a fairer record for loyalty. He has stood by the Government in every trial. When South go in peace, Curtin was exhorting them to stand by the Union at all hazards.

And the unanimity with which he was re nominated shows that he is all-powerful in the H. Blanchard, Wm. Ham, Newel J. Bixby, popular heart.
