At a large school in the coun ry, a rebellion took place among the boys. The master, very at length, either by threats or 1 ribes, or both, induced the of the boys to disc ose the name of a boy named Davison. He way, of course, severely punished and expelled, carrying away with him sentiments of deadly hate, instead of the affection he had formerly fi it for his school fellow. Many years intervene, during which ther never had the least in tercourse. The men who had peached i ent to the East Indies. He returned, and lan led on the coast of Desonshire. Stopping to di e ata small inn, he enquired of the waiter who gentleman lived in the neighborhood; and saring that the Squire of the parish was a Mr. Davison, the name struck high. He thought he recollected that his former school fellow used to talk of his bome in Deconshire; and while his dinner was getting ready, he determined to go to the squire's house. A maid servant opened the door; he sent in his name, saying that, if Mr. Davison had been educated at such a school, he would recollect it. He was introduced, and most cordially received by his school 'ellow, whom he found laid up with a fit of the gout, and was pressed to dine, with many i pologies for bad tare, &c., Mr. Davison have g unfortunately given permission to all his se vants to go to a neighboring place, and having kept only the man, who was his nurst.

Mr. Davison appeared so re biced in talking over old stories with his friend and pressed him so strongly to be charitable enough to pass aneither day with him, that at last he consented. Next morning the unfortunate guest was found with his throat cut from ear to ear. Of course the maid servant was taken up on suspicion; indeed, as it seemed impossible from its nature that the wound should have been self-inflicted, and she was the only creature in the house excepting her master, who was unable to move, there did not seem a doubte! The trial came in; Mr. Davison appeared at prosecutor; and Lord Rosslyn was his counse). In spite of the poor girl's protestations of i mocence, the case seemed nearly decided, wher Mr. Davison sent a note to his counsel desirio; him to ask the girl whether she had heard any noise during the night. Lord Rosslyn of lected; but his client insisted. This seems to have been one of those strange perversions of intellect by which guilt is ordained to betray self, when all the untifice which had accompraied it is lulled to lelcep. What could have be in the object of this raquiry doce not appear; it f effect was fatal. The girl replied that she resplicated hearing a moise along the passage which had awakened her, but that having been much fatigued during the day, she was too sleepy o get up and enquire the cause. More que tions were asked; the noises and various other circumstances described. Suspicions arose against Mr. Davison, and the business ended in his arowing himself the murderer. He said that from the moment in which he beheld the fece of his old school fellow, he had defermined on revenging his anciche quarrel by the death of the offender. He Fad crawled on hands and knees from his own mum to that of his unfortunate guest, and unable to support himself with out the use of his hands, had found great d'floulty in opening the door, but helping himsel! by his teeth, had at last achieved it, reached the bed, and perpebruted the borrid deed. Ale bad then crawled stack, and tried to free h meelf from all the Added stains before be got it to his own bed .fr was the extraordingly n se made by him, which had disturbed the m id servent, and at last led to his detection. dinburgh Review.

Ancodotes About Jen. Grant.

The New York correspon lent of the Boston Journal tells the following tories: "Many enquiries have ben made about Gen Grant's politics. I sm har oy to inform your readers, from his own lips to what party he belongs, and under what anner he marches. A near relative of his has been passing some time in this city. While t ith Gen. Grant at the West, before he was nade lieutenant general, the friend said to bint: 'General, I have been enquired of to-day moont your politics. Did you give the pasties any information? was the quiet query. I did not,' was the an-Knocking the ashes from his cigar, the General continued: 'When I resided at the South, I had the opinions and projudices of southern people against the Republican party. I brought those opinions and prejudices with me when I came to Illinois. Hat I taken active part in politics, I should have been with the party opposed to the Regablicans. I watched Mr. Lincoln's course, and was satisfied with his patriofiem. But these are not the times for parties. Indeed, in this crisis there can be but two parel lies those for the country, and those for its foes, I lielong to the party of the Union .-Those who are the most earnest in carrying on the war and putting down the rebellion, have tay support. As a soldier, I obey the laws, and execute the orders of all my superiors. I expeet every man under me to do the same.'

"When Mrs. Gran less Washington for her western home, she rama ned a short time in this city at the Fifth Avinue Hotel. Several gentlemen called upot her, and in the course of the conversation of her husband, and expressed a hope containing about 70 acres, with about 50 acres imthat he would be sucressful in this campaign. Her whole manner, Juiet, dignified and reserved, seemed to expines surprise that any one could doubt his succe. Pausing a moment, she replied: "I have no doubt that the General will succeed, for Er is a very obstinate man.' This remark ended the conversation.
