HEAVEN. BY MISS MANCY A. W. PRIEST.

Boyond there chilly winds and gloomy skies, a Regand death's cloudy bortul.

There is a land where besuty never dies And love becomes immortal-A land whose light is never dimmed by shade, Whose fields are ever vernal; Where nothing beautiful can ever fade, But blooms for eye, eternal.

We may not know how sweet its balmy air, How bright and fair its flowers; We may not hear the songs that echo there Through those orentmied bowers,

The city's shining towers we may not see With our dim, earthly vision; For death, the ellent warder, keeps the key That opes the gates elysian.

But sometimes, when adown the western sky The first sunset lingers,
Its golden gates swing inward noiselessly,
Unleaded by ellent fingers.

And while they stand a moment half-sjar, Gleams from the inner glory
Stream brightly through the azure vault afer, And halt reveal the story. O land unknown! O land of love divine!

The Constitutaion was bearing down the enemy under her topsails-every man was at his respective station and all on board were eager for the contest -when the Guerriere commenced at long that Commodore Hull gave a peremptory order to his officers not to apply a single match until he gave the word. When the Constitution was berries, glowing gearlet through their covering bearing down in such gallant style, and it became evident that a severe action with the American frigate was inevitable, young Reed left his station and proceeded to the quarter "Why, King Brace! can it be possible that deck, and respectfully but firmly represented to Captian Dacres that he was an American citizen who had been unjustly detained on board a British frigate; that he had hitherto faithfully performed the duties assigned him; "Buy some? of course. Give me a dozen and that it could not reasonably be expected he would fight against his countrymen; he therefore begged leave to decline the honor of participating in the engagement.

NO. 47

The English Captain frankly told him that he appreciated his patriotic feelings-that he did not wish Americans on board to use arms against their countrymen; and he subsequently ordered them all into the coukpit to render assistance, if necessary, to the surgeon. Reed left the spar deck after the Guerriere had completed preparation. Several shots were known to have taken effect, but the Constitution had not yet fired a gun-much to the amusement of the British turs, who predicted the surrender of the enemy without resistance, with the exception of a veteran man-of-war's man, who was in the battle of the Nile, and gruffly observed with a significant shake of the head-" that Yankee knows what he's about."

A few moments passed away, and the Constitution roused into her a tremendous broadside. Every gun was double shotted and well pointed, and the effect on the enemy can hardly be conceived.

Mistimed jests and jeers at the imperturbable but harmless Yankees immediately gave place to the grouns of the wounded and dying, and sixteen poor mutilated fellows were tumbled into the cockpit from the effects of the first broadside. Dacres fought as long as there was a spar standing or a gun could be brought to bear on the enemy, but when his maste were completely swept away, his officers and men mostly killed or wounded, encumbering the decks; while the scuppers were streaming with gore; when the Guerriere, which a few hours ago was justly considered one of the most splendid specimens of naval architecture which belonged to the British navy, lay on the water, an unsightly, unmanageable masa; when he had no longer the stump of a mast left from which to display the proud ensign of his country, the gallant Briton began to think he had got into an ugly scrape from which he could not possibly extri cate himself. He could no longer oppose a feeble resistance to his more formidable fue.

Captain Hull sent an officer to take possession of the Guerriere. When he arrived alongside, he demanded of the commander of the English frigate if he had struck.

Dacres was extremely reluctant to this concession in plain terms, but with a shrewdness that would have done honor to a Yankee, endeavored to evade the question.

"I do not know that it would be prudent to continue the engagement any longer," said he. "Do I understand you to say that you have struck ?" inquired the American lieutement. From the 45th Pennsylvania Rogiment CAMP NEAR PETERSTORO, VA., 2

July 4th, 1884. I FRIEND Come-Contrary to the general aspeciation of the army, and perhaps of the public, nothing exciting or of interest has transpired at the front to-day. On the contrary, there is if anything, less firing than usual between the pickets. The weather is dry, suitry and exceedingly hot. The constant discharge of small arms and frequent cannonading, which has been in progress since the beginning of the slege of Petersburg, together with the great heat and uncommon drouth which has prevailed during the past two weeks, have given to the atmosphere a sulphurous smell, and parched the air to a degree really oppressive, as well as reduced our supply of water in and around camp until it has become an inconvenient scarcity. Roads are fearfully dusty. Symptoms of rain have been frequent, but with the exception of a few inconsiderable showers, we have thus far been doomed to disappointment. The health of the army is suprisingly good under existing circumstances. The daily arrival of convalescents more than equals the number of those disabled by diseasee. Our fations have been increased in quality and quantity until we are faring better than ever before. Besides our usual gove ernment allowance we get daily issues from the Sunitary Commission, such na pickles, cabbage, onions, radiahes, dried apples, tea, candented mirk, lemons. &c., while the sick get still greater delicacies. None can relish those luzuries as well as the soldier, who for months has been dieted exclusively on fresh beef, hard tack, and coffee as an army invariably and necessarily is during a vigorous campaign such as the army of the Potomeo has passed during the last two months. The knowledge of this should, and I am confident will encourage the friends at hothe in their efforts to attest their devotion to the cause of the soldier, by contributing to those beneficent institutions—the Sanitary and Christian Commission.

Many a war-worn veteran as he sits down on his knapsack to feast and indulge his stinted stomach on those luxuries thinks of home, and that perhaps the dish he is eating was prepared by his own mother, wife, sister, or sweet heart, which I assure you makes it taste none the worse. We also get a gill of whiskey to a mun as a daily item of rations, which while it is not sufficient to intoxicate, proves a valuable stime ulant and does us more good than harm, particularly while on duty in the pits.

By going on the skirmish line any desirable quantity of good ice can be got, but the icehou e is c mmanded by the relief shart ship its and whenever a blue jacket appears a shower of bullets, or perhaps a shell is sure to follow-Several have been killed in attempting to reach it, but ice is a great luxury in such times as these, and scarcely a day passes but that we feast on the cooling heverage, or drink fee cool lemonade as good as our city saloons afford.

The siege progresses uninterruptedly. The tive peace and quiet with their southern neight bors. Along the front of our corps the ratile Occasionally the rebels run out a battery and attempt to shell our lines, but are invariable already," said Dacres; "I have hardly men silenced in a few moments by the unerring sim enough to work in gun, and my ship is in a of our gunners. During the night shelling. with mortars is freely indulged in on both sides. Some of the rebels' shells in the dead of night burst in fearful proximity to our pits but bare as yet inflicted no considerable dumage. When awake, these monster visitors can be easily dodged, as they are visible for miles before that strike or burst. The greater part of our cashunities is caused by the fire of the rebel sharpshooters, who with unerzing aim, make it al-

Private Morris Smith, in shoulder, Private Peter Bellinger, in head. Neither of them are dangerously hurt. They have been sent to the hospital. The advance line of our division is not more than 100 varies from the rebel works, which are very formideble and being daily strengthened as the clime mer of picks and shovels in the hot sun in front of us plainly show. While this is going on Grant's army is not idle; our engineers and arrong details from different regiments are constantly digging, daily increasing the magnitude and strength of our fortifications. Since the destruction of the Weldon railroad by our fut. ces the whistle of the cars, which a few days since could be distinctly heard has ceased to taunt us and defy our approach. You may not be surprised to hear of a fear ful collision of the armies at any time, but let the future speak for itself. When Grant moves it will be with a purpose and when he is full ? prepared, and judging from the past we have no grounds for fears in the future. The boys are feeling well, the majority of them are un picket to-day, selebrating the "fourth" and picking off the "Johnnies" at the same time.

Capt. Richards returned from the hospital where he had been temporarily detained by an. attack of fever and ague, on the 2d instant in good health. Hoping we have not been forgotten at the celebrations and pic-nics held in the familiar groves of old Tioga, to-day. I remain, VITEBAN.

Very respectfully yours,

To CURE THE BLOAT IN CATTLE.-Take, & stick about the size of a large rolling piz. or about two inches in diameter, and after fastening a string at each end put it in the animal's amouth, and tie it with strings around its head. so that the stick will act like a bit, and keep the mouth open. In a very short time, the The milk from some cows in the spring and blust arising from eating too much wet clover, will abate gradually; and where the choking. arises from a notates or piece of turnip, it will work itself either up or down, when the mouth is thus kept open.

THE President has determined to appoint doreship.
