[From the New York Tribune.] ON THE CHICAGO SURRENDER.

EY BAYARD .. TAYLOR.

What! hoist the white flag when our triumph is nigh? What! crouch before Treason? make Freedom a lie?
What! spike all our guns when the foe is at bay
And the rags of the black banner dropping away?
Tear down the strong name that our nation has won,
And strike her brave bird from his home in the sun?

He's a coward who shrinks from the lift of the sword He's a traitor who mooks at the sacrifice poured; Rameless and homeless the doom that should blast. The knave who stands idly till peril is past, But he who submits when the thunders bave burst And victory dawns, is of cowards the worst!

Is the old spirit dead? Are we broken and weak, That cravens so shamelessly lift the white cheek To court the swift insult, nor blush at the blow, The tools of the Treason and friends of the foe! See! Anarchy smiles at the Peaco which they ask, And the eyes of Disunion flash out through the mask

Give thanks, ye brave boys, who by vale and by crag Bear onward, unfaitering, our noble old flag, Strong arms of the Union, heroes living and dead, For the blood of your valor is uselessly shed! No soldier's green laurelis promised you here, But the white rag of "eympathy" softly shall cheer!

And you, ye war martyrs, who preach from your graves How captives are nursed by the masters of slaves, Or, living, still linger in shadows of Death,—.
Pull out the starved muscle, recall the faint breath,
And shout, till those cowards rejoice at the cry:
"By the hands of the Union we fought for we die!".

By the God of our Fathers! this shame we shall share,
But it grows too debasing for freemen to bear, And Washington, Jackson, will turn in their graves.
When the Union shall rest on two races of slaves,
Or, spurning the spirit which bound it of yore,
And sundered, exists as a nation no more!

THE MILLER'S DAUGHTER.

Many years ago, the community of a hamlet in the south of France, was startled by a crime, rare, indeed, in their quiet, agricultural district. A wealthy farmer was found dead, at early morning, within one hundred yards of his own house. He had been killed by blows administered with a heavy stake, and in fact it excels in every particular.

Ques. Where is this Plow to be found?

Ans. At the KNOXVILLE FOUNDRY, where contents, including a considerable sum of money, which he was known to have received the previous evening for some sheep sold by him in the neighboring market town.

When the awe and excitement created by this event had subsided a little, every exertion was made by the authorities to ferret out the ed for the discovery of the murderer, proclasuccessive Sundays at the church door. At eighteen years.

The person who brought the charge against young Laroche was a man of the name of Landry-a stranger in the district-but who had already been appointed by the lord of the manor as one of the keepers of his game preserves. Landry testified that he had seen Laroche cutting a stake from a hedge on the afternoon previous to the murder, and that he had reproved him for it, and, taking the stake from him had-stuck-it in the bank of the hedge at a particular spot. . The stake was the MRS. A. J. Therefore Laroche was conhanged on a certain day, at a certain place; until which time he was placed in the jail of the district—the third floor of a large stone building, the lower part of which was a mill. The prison consisted of a single apartment, lighted by one small window at a height of shout sixteen feet from the floor. The side of the building from which the window looked; ran sheer down to the water of a dark and deep river, which crept lazily by the mill, but quickened its pace a little lower down, until it gradually became a rushing torrent, leaping wildly to its fall over a perpendicular ledge of rocks. Bodies carried over that fall were said never to have been recovered, and it was a fixed notion among the country people that there was a force in the whirl-pool below by which everything falling into it was carried down into the unexplored abyeses of the earth.

It was the day before that fixed for the execution of young Laroche, and the priest of the parish, Father Allard by name, had been left alone with the prisoner, in order to prepare him, by the consolation of religion, for his approaching doom. To his words of comfort Laroche listened with humility and silence, until the good father began to dilate upon his chances of forgiveness in the next world for the terrible crime committed by bim. Then the prisoner electrified him by declaring his perfect innocence of the crimea position which he meant to maintain, he said, with his latest breath. To be brief, the youth of the prisoner his earnest asseveration of innocence, and a wavering doubt of his guilt which had all along troubled Father Allard's mind, so wrought upon that worthy, man that he at last consented to commit himself to a plan for giving, the prisoner a chance of escape, if not from death, at least from the ignominy of dying by the hands of the accursed hangman.

"If I die by the gallows, most reverend father," said the young man, "a great entrow death. The real murderer is sure to be disbeen a murdered man, and the just retribution of Heaven will pursue my murderers .-Aid me to escape, rather than risk a great stain upon your conscience. Stand upon this with the assistance of some neighbors, in exchair, which I place upon the table, thus, and tricating the priest's horse, came in, and the SCHOOL BOOKS of every sing used in the second to those indebted to make immediate payment, and then, by mounting upon your shoulders, I can meeting was an affecting one between the two, constantly on hand and act by finall or otherwise, to order.

"I swim like an otter; and, at any rate, t is better to be drowned than hanged." Convinced of the young man's innocence, Father Allard consented to aid him in his escape. A moment sufficed to carry the plan into execution. The prisoner gained the window, and disappeared.

Parrading in a straggling way outside the building, went one of the minor officers of ustice a stolid peasant, who had been placed there by way of sentry, and who at this moment happened to be looking towards the river wall of the mill. His sight nearly left him, as he afterward stated, when he saw a man drop from the window, strike on to a platform that protruded from a doorway in the second story, and, rebounding from that, fell into the water with a heavy plunge, reappearing at intervals, until he was carried away into the rapids below. The alarm was at once given. Village officials rushed to the prison room, where they found Father Allard, alone, seated in the chair, pale, and as if just recovering from the sight of some supernatural vision. To the questions put to him he replied that, as he was administering the consolation of his holy office to the prisoner, a voice sounded through the apartment, accompanied by the shadow of a mighty pair of wings, on which the prisoner mounted to the ceiling of the apartment, and was no more seen by him. The voice, he added, proclaimed the prisoner's innocence, and that the real circumstances of the murder would soon be made manifest. It was a miracle, and the good country people, ever ready to accept that form of interposition, were easily persuaded to do so on the present occasion. Meantime. Laroche, when he leaped from the window, had forgotten all about the platof grain, which splashed into the dark waters of the river, appearing to the eyes of the bewildered sentry to be the body of the man who had dropped from the prison window .--Laroche lay upon the parrow platform, stunned by his heavy fall. Spiride, the miller's daughter, saw him fall. There was no one else in the mill at the time. She drew him quickly behind the sacks and great heaps of grain on. the floor, and, having administered to him such restoratives as her young experience suggested, threw some loose sacks over him, and told bim to lie still."

That night Spiride and her lover-Laroche and she had been lovers for about six hours only-made their way to where a boat lay moored below the falls, and, embarking in it, were soon carried beyond the reach of pursuit. It was supposed by the affrighted villaabove had been seen to strike upon it; and, and was convicted and hanged accordingly .--Previous to this execution, however, he made a clean breast of it to Father Allard, confessing that he had murdered the farmer for his money, killing him with the stake cut from the hedge by young Laroche, which, as he stated, singularly enough, suggested to him the idea of committing the crime. Two years elapsed, and Father Allard had been promoted to a parish at a distance of some fifty miles from the one of which he had been pastor for so many years.

Shortly after his arrival there, his duties led him to take a journey on horseback, some miles into the interior of the parish of which he had a charge. Part of the road travelled by him wound through a swampy forest region. victed of the murder, and sentenced to be a sluggish stream that had formerly been spanned by a bridge, of which nothing but the turned his hore's head, and rode along the bank of the river, hoping to find another bridge, or at least, a ford by which he could cross to the further side; nor had he gone far when he he had fallen into one of those quicksands which are not uncommon in that part of France, the good father knew that to throw himself from his horse would be certain death, us the water was not deep enough to swim in, and the hungry sand at the bottom was gasping for ed for help.

him. He held his horse, therefore, and shout-The water was gaining upon him, as the terrified horse sank deeper and deeper in the treacherous stream. Up, up it came, until it reached his saddle flaps, and then his knees, and he gave himself up for lost, when distant growing feebler with each repetion. And now a man bursts his way through the brushwood boughs with all his remaining strength, the priest was drawn to the bank by the woodsman, fainting and senseless, however, and with hardly a visible spark of life.

When Father Allard recovered consciousness he found himself in a small but comfortable room. Seeing him open his eyes, a buxom young woman, who was bathing his temples, uttered an exclamation of joy, calling him by will some day fall upon all concerned in my name; and now, as his dizzy senses brightened, what was his surprise to recognize in his atcovered, sooner or later, and then I shall have tendant the lost Spiride! Explanations ensued, and all was made as clear as day, without recourse to marvel or miracle.

Presently Laroche, who had been engaged

." My conscience is clear now," said Father Allard. "Heaven has surely pardoned the little fiction framed by me, else why--"

NO. 4.

"But hold, reverend father," cried Laroche, interrupting him; "there was no fiction in the case; you said that I was carried away by an angel's wings, and so I was, and this is the angel that saved me!" And he laughingly threw his arms around his pretty wife, and hugged her to his side.

Poetical justice might now have been well satisfied, but I have a few words further to add upon the subject.

Laroche, who was now employed as forester pon an estate, was enabled by the assistance of Father Allard to return to his native village, where, not long after, he obtained an appointment to the very keepership formerly held by the assassin Landry. The mystery attending his miraculous escape and reappearance gave him an extraordinary influence among the peasantry. Stories lose nothing by circulation. He eventually became a sanctified personage in the community; and a rudely carved effigy of him is still to be seen in the chapel of the parish, with a pair of angel's wings hovering ver him, and a cross at his head and feet.

[From the New York Herald.] The Presidential Question-Shall We Have an Insurrection at the North f

During the political canvass in 1860 we warned both parties that the election might be followed by a revolution. Our warnings were not heeded then, and the consequence was that the election of Lincoln was quickly succeeded form. As he fell upon it, he displaced a sack by the secession of the Southern States. Now, at the opening of the canvass in 1864, we have the same warning to utter; but it is in regard to an insurrection at the North. The experirience of the past four years ought to have taught the American people that the Herald does not predict rashly, and that its prophecies are worthy of the most earnest attention .-When every other paper said that there was no danger of disunion, we assured the people that disunion would certainly be the result of Mr. Lincoln's election. Now we as solemnly sesure them that, unless careful precautions are taken, a Northern insurrection will be the certain result of Mr. Lincoln's re-election.

We have not the slightest doubt that there is mutual understanding between the Seymours, the Woods, Vallandigham and the rebels. This understanding is shown in the secession platform adopted by the Chicago Convention, and gers that Spiride must have been carried from in the nomination of Mr. Pendleton, of Ohiodent. We have now driven the rebels completemation of which bounty was made for several as the whirl-pool below the torrent had never by to the wall. Gen. Grant has the best of been known to give up its dead, but little them at Richmond, and Gen. Sherman has last some disclosures were made implicating a search was made for her, and her friends re- succeeded in capturing Atlanta. This is not young man named Laroche—a stripling of signed themselves to mourning for her awful the time, then, that any reasonable man would fate. Less than six months after this Landry be talking about "an immediate cessation of hostilities." We are in favor of an armistice. like that between Prussia and Denmark, where both sides hold their ground and are ready to begin the conflict at any moment; but there is a vast deal of difference between such an armistice and the "immediate cessation of hostilities" which the Chicago platform requires. Nothing can explain such a platform except the hypothesis that it was dictated by Jeff. Davis to the peace democrats, and that these peace men foisted it upon the Chicago Convention as the price of their endorsement of General McClellan's nomination.

> For three years past the Herald has sustained and defended the hero of Antietam. We have done full justice to his generalship, his statesmanship, his honesty and his patriotism. But when McClellan takes his stand upon a cowand, after a ride of several miles, he came to ardly peace platform we are at a loss how to follow him and defend him. This the General has not yet done, and we hope that he will abutments now remained, however. The priest never be foolish enough to do it. We advise and urge him to come out boldly and declare that his only platform is his past record as a Union general, and that his sentiments are those expressed in his letter from Harrison's discerned, by hoof marks, a place where cat- Landing and his oration at West Point. If he the seemed to be in the habit of wading through, hesitates to do this he is lost. There must or coming to drink. The water appeared to be be no prevarication nor equivocation. The shallow; so he urged his unwilling horse into rotten Chicago platform must be kicked to it, and got about half-way across when the animal began to plunge and struggle violently, | ted. He had better a thousand fold decline the sinking at the same time, as if drawn down | nomination than to accept it upon such condiby some invisible power. Aware, now, that tions as those imposed by the Convention. The Chicago platform invites defeat, and it must be broken up, either by McClellan himself or by the voice of the people at the polls.

We candidly and sincerely believe that the peace copperheads at the North do not desire the election of McClellan any more than the Southern secessionists desired the election of Douglas or Breckenridge in 1860. They bitterly opposed McClellan at Chicago, and openly denounced him as a tyrant and a usurper. Finally they accepted him, upon condition that they should have the platform and the Vice President. But even now the copperheads are shouts came in response to his, which were not earnest in his support. Like the rebels, they want to see Mr. Lincoln re-elected. There is no saying but that Mr. Lincoln may be on the river bank, and, laying his axe upon a elected by a small majority, and in that event tall, slender, young tree, cuts it down four or the copperheads intend to raise a revolution at five rapid strokes, leaning it so that it falls out the North. This they can very readily do if upon the water, its topmost boughs just brush- the people do not beware of the trap. Suping the horseman in its fall. Grasping the pose the election to be decided by only a few thousand votes, then the democratic minority will be nearly as strong as the republican majority. In fact the minority will be stronger; for the democrats will fight, while the abolitionists will not; and so a thousand democrats are more than equal to two thousand abolition republicans. What, then, is to hinder a revolution? Is it the army? The moment the army is withdrawn to put down an insurrection here the rebels will come out of their intrenchments and capture Washington. This, as we understand it, is part of the copperhead plan, and if successful it will put an end to the government and the country.

That this idea of a vast Northern conspiracy between the copperheads and the rebels is no mere bugbear is evident from the fact that the Chicago Convention, instead of adjourning sine Rates of Advertising.

Posters, Handbills, Bill-Heads, Letter-Heads, and all kinds of Jobbing done in country establishments, executed neatly and promptly. Justices', Constable's and other BLANKS, constantly on hand.

mittee, This is equivalent to the organization of a revolutionary body. Our merchant and capitalists so consider it; for they are closing up business, shipping their goods back to Europe, turning their property into gold, sending their money across the water, and in every way preparing to leave the country as soon as the revolution begins. These movements are not to be lightly considered. They mean mischief, and show that trouble is brewing. Gen. McClellan can avert that trouble and restore public confidence if he have the pluck, and sagacity to ignore the Chicago plat-form and come out boldly as a Jackson democrat on the platform of his past record. Then he will have a fair chance of election, because he will not be bound to a cowardly policy if he be elected. But what could Washington himself do if he were pledged to negotiate for "an immediate cessation of hostilities?" The Chicago platform will encourage the rebels to hold out until election, and, as things stand at present, the peace copperheads have promised them one of two things: either the re-election of Lincoln and a Northern insurrection-in which case the rebels will have the upperhand of us; or, in the event of McClellan's election, "an immediate cessation of hostilities," in which case the rebels will have everything their own way. General McClellan can destroy these schemes by framing his own platform out of sound Union timber and being elected upon it. Then a Northern insurrection will be impossible, and, if the people do their duty in the meantime, there will be no rebellion left to make terms with, and no Jeff. Davis in existence to receive an offer for "an immediate cessation of hostilities." This is as great a crisis as that at Harrison's Landing or at Antietam. Let Little Mac reflect deeply, and act

Days Without Nights.

Nothing strikes a stranger more forcibly, if he visits Sweden at the season of the year when the days are longest, than the absence of night. Dr. Baird once related some interesting facts. He arrived at Stockholm from Gottenburg, a distance of four hundred miles, in the morning, and in the afternoon went to see some friends. He returned about midnight, when it was as light as it is in England half an hour before sundown. You could see distinctly, but all was quiet in the streets; it seemed as if the inhabitants were gone away or were dead .-The sun in June goes down in Stockholm a little before ten o'clock. There is a great illumination all night, as the sun passes round the earth towards the north pole, and the refraction of its rays is such that you can see to read till time Dr. Baird awoke in Stockholm, he was surprised to see the sun shining into his room. He looked at his watch and found it was only 3 o'clock. The next time he awoke it was 5 o'clock, but there were no persons in the street. The Swedes in the cities are not very indus-

There is a mountain at the Gulf of Botbnia where on the 21st of June, the sun does not seem to go down at all. A steamer goes up from Stockholm for the purpose of carrying those who are curious to witness the phenomenon. It occurs only one night. The sun reaches the horizon, you can see the whole face of it, and in five minutes more it begins to rise. At the North cape, latitude seventy-two degrees, the sun does not go down for several weeks. In June it would be about twenty-five degrees above the horizon at midnight.

In the Winter time the sun disappears, and is not seen again for weeks; then it comes and remains for ten, fifteen or twenty minutes, when it descends, and finally does not set at all, but makes almost a circle around the heavens.

Dr. Baird was asked how they managed in those latitudes with regard to hired persons, and what they consider a day. He replied, they worked by the hour, and twelve hours would be considered a day's work. Birds and animals take their accustomed rest at usual hours, whether the sun goes down or not.

A WOMAN'S DESERT .- The following illustrative idea of what constitutes a desert in a fel male mind, is taken from a novel entitled ' Marriage :" Douglas saw the storm gathering on the brow of his capricious wife, and, clasping her to his arms, he said: • "Are you indeed so changed, my Julia, that you have forgotten the time when you used to declare you would prefer a desert with your Henry to a throne with a another?" "No, certainly, not changed; but I-I did not know what a desert was, or at least I had formed rather addifferent idea of it."

"What was your idea of a desert? Do tell me love." "Oh! I had fancied it a beautiful place. full of roses and myrtle, and smooth green turf and murmuring rivulets, and though very retired, not absolutely out the world, where one could occasionally see one's friend's, and be free from the cares of crying babies." Gen. Dix is the oldest employed General now prominently before the public; He was born in

New Hampshire in 1798. Hunter was born in Washington in 1802. McClernard in Kentucky in 1817. Hooker in Massachusetts in 1817. Sherman in Ohio in 1820. Grant in Ohio in 1812. Franklin in Pennsylvania in 1823. Hancock in the same state in 1824.-Sigel in Germany in 1824, and Slocum in New

A wag kept up a continual fire of witticisms at a social party, when a puritanical gentleman, who enjoyed sermons and snuff better than jokes and puns, sharply observed:

"If you keep on, you will make every decent person leave the house." "That would be a sorry joke," was the dry reply, "for you would certainly feel very lonesome when left alone."

The evening is the time for social delight .--The fountain of pleasure, like many springs
