From the 207th Pennsylania Regiment. IN FRONT OF PETERSEURG, MAR. 26, 1865. M. H. COBB, Esq.-Dear Sir : 11 will be of interest to your readers to kniw some of the particulars of the fight in whic this regiment was engaged on the 25th inst nt."

It is well known to the reading ublic that our advanced line, immediately in itant of Petersburg is held by the 9th Corps. The 1st Division occupies the right next to the Appomattox; the 2d Division, lies to the left of the first; and the 3d Division consisting of six new Pennsylvania regiments is stationed about a half a mile in the rear of the other ten as a reserve.

Yesterday morning before daylight, the rebels made an advance unobserved en the lines of the 1st Division, and succeeded in capturing Fort Steadman, and several other important works, with very little opposition from. our sleepy pickets. The 1st Brigade of, the 3d Division lying nearest the point attacked soon engaged the enemy; and the 2d Erigade composed of the 205th, 207th and 211 Pennsylvania regiments being aroused by the unusual discharge of fire arms, soon formed into line. and by daylight were moving toward the scene of action, some two or three miles distant. Having arrived in close proximity to the captured Fort, the 2d Brigade was halted in a deep ravine to await orders-meanwhile our artillery had assembled from different parts and were pouring showers of iron hall into the rebel ranks, who in turn were vigorously returning the fire from our own guns which they had captured in the morning. The 1st Brigade was closely pressing the rebels farther to the right, when about half past eight the 2d Brigade was ordered to charge. Rising from the ravine "as from their graves," as a rebel afterward expressed it, and uttering a savage war whoop, the 2d Brigade, two thousand strong, charged upon 'Fort Steadman and the adjacent works. The rebels not having previously known the position of our troops, were completely surprised and panic-stricken, and made but feeble resistance; some attempted to fly, but being closely pressed by our brave boys, the greater portion of them gladly surrendered.

The 207th P. V. was the first t | enter the Fort where they soon placed their colors pierced by five rebel bullets. All our works were re-captured, and the rebel loss is pretty accurately set down at three thousand in killed, wounded, and prisoners. Our own loss from the first will not reach four hundred. One rebel General and several rebel flags are reported taken.

Many instances of personal bravery on the part of our troops might be mentioned, but as I cannot do justice to all in this article, I omit names, and append merely a list of the killed and wounded in this regiment.

STAND AND DELIVER.

A somewhat amusing and not altogether uninstructive debate came off in the State Legislature on the 9th of March. The occaeion was the introduction of a supplemental act to extend the provisions of an act relative to carrying concealed weapons, which act related to Philadelphia only, to the whole State. To this extension Mr. Rice, of Northampton demurred. He proposed to except the county of Northampton. His reasons were stated to be, in effect, that the state of affairs in that alties for such a betrayal of the confidence of county was most extraordinary ; so extraordinary that individuals passing over the most frequented roads were made to stand and deliver by foot-pads. Mail carriers have been robbed also. He objected to the extension to include bis county, lest it might constrain travelers to become "walking arsenals, with their belts stuck full of pistols and long knives."

Mr. Brown, of Warren, admitted that the county of Northampton might be infested with brigands. But the purpose of the act was to disarm such people.

Mr. Hakes, of Luzerne, was opposed to excepting any county. He declared it to be 'a notorious fact that two-thirds of the cases of homicide were directly traceable to the evil practice of carrying concealed weapons. " Let us fall back upon the law," said Mr. Hakes, "for this is a land of law, where we profess to able to protect innocent men and punish criminals." " Besides," said Mr. Hakes, "it occurs to me that a man who carries a pistol or a knife in his pocket, commonly, is a coward," without faith in the power of the law to protect him.

Mr. Purdy, of Northumberland, stood for the necessity of carrying concealed weapons. He put several hypothetical cases in which a peacable man was beset by a mob of drunken and infuriated men. If men could not emy were driven from Fort Steadman and our carry pistols they would use knives, brick. bats, stones, et cetera. He desired to offer an amendment excepting Northumberland county.

After considerable discussion pro and con, the bill passed without amendment.

It is a wise law. One clause declares that a jary may infer the intention to commit an injury from the fact that concealed weapons are found upon or known to be carried by any person. This is proper. Few men habitnally carry concealed weapons who are not cowards and bullies. Every garrotter and burglar, every thief and gambler, carries his revolver as honest men carry their watches. When the law is weak, or the appliances for its enforcement are wanting, there is an onouse for taking extraordinary means for self-defence .---But where the laws are enforced and the guilty brought to justice, the practice of carrying concealed weapons is evil and only evil.

Nowhere in the civilized world was this practice so universal as in the slave States prior to the rebellion. There, every man, and many women, were in the constant practice of carrying concealed weapons. It was a practice born of the fears and distrust of the peosystem of violence, liable at any moment to bring forth violence to the oppressor. The history of the South, as collated from its newspapers, was a history of violence and bloodshed, of brawls, duels, and cold-blooded shootings and stabbings. No reasonable man can doubt that this condition of Southern society was weapons. If carried, there is danger of unnecessary use; and though the condition of large cities may sometimes render the carrying of a pistol a measure of safety, the experience of decent men gues to prove, that more meet violent deaths who carry weapons, than of those who trust the police and leave their revolvers in their drawers, at home. If no man is permitted to carry weapons secretly, as a matter of course the violence which grows out of this practice will cease to furnish paragraphs for the journals and dependence upon law will measurably increase. The law alluded to does not affect the right of self-defence. A man may defend himself against assault with any proper degree of violence he may choose to employ. If he considers his life in danger he can find sufficient remedy in the law. We know nothing of the condition of society in Northumberland and Northampton counties except as stated by the gentlemen who represent them in the Legislature ; and if their statements may be relied on, it would seem to be as good a remedy as any to boldly take arms and exterminate the class which depends upon the road for a living. It strikes us that a few unconcealed weapons would prove a great reformatory agency in those intensely semi-rebel localities.

pose upon the country-a religion of curses and excommunications, of spoliation in this world and anathemas in the world to come." It will be seen that the editor of the Record er finds no words of condemnation for the base wrong which was perpetrated upon Brownlow and the people of Tennessee by the devile who labored for the rebellion, and for whom all the precious ointment of Copperhead sympathy is spilled. We submit it as a question to which there can be but one reply-whether there is the shadow of a doubt as to which party to this war the editor of the Recorder belongs .--We pass over the studied misrepresentations of the war news which he weekly puts forth to his public. That is a chronic disease, and defies ordinary remedies. But the force of public opinion will furnish the pains and penthe people. The true men of the country can afford to await the progress of events. He cannot.

HDORS. ABMY OF THE POTOMAC, MARCH 26, '65. GENERAL ORDERS, No. 13-The Major Gen. ral Commanding announces to the Army the success of the operations of yesterday. The enemy, with a temerity for which he has paid dearly, massed his forces, and succeeded, through the reprehensible want of vigilance of the Third Brigade First Division, Ninth Corps, in breaking through our lines, capturing Fort Steadman, and Batteries 9, 10 and 11; The prompt measures taken by Major-Gen.-

Parks, the firm bearing of the troops of the Ninth Corps in the adjacent portions of the line held by the enemy, and the conspicuous gallantry of the Third Division of this Corps, for the first time under fire, together with the energy and skill displayed by Brig-Gen Hartranft, its leader, quickly repaired this disaster; and the enlines, with heavy losses in killed and wounded, leaving in our hands eight battle-flags and over 1,900 prisoners.

The enemy being driven from the front o the Ninth Corps, the offensive was assumed by the Sixth and Second Corps; the enemy by night was driven from his entrenched pick et line, and all his efforts to recover the same, which were particularly determined and persistent on the Second Corps's front were resisted and repulsed with heavy losses, leaving with the Sixth Corps over 400 prisoners, and with the Second Corps two battle-flags and over 300 prisoners

The troops of the Sixth Corps, reported by Major Gen. Wright as engaged in these operations, were Getty's'Division. Keifer's Brigade of Seymour's Division, and Hamblin's and Edward's Brigade of Wheaton's Division.

Of the Second Corps, Major-Gen. Humphreys mentions Mile's and Mott's Divisions, and Smythe's Brigade of Hay's Division, supported by Griffin's Division, Fifth Corps.

The result of the day was the thorough defeat of the enemy's plans, the capture of his strongly intrenched picket-line under the artillery fire of his main works, and the capture of ten battle-flags and about 2,800 prisonersa result on which the Major General commanding heartily congratulates the Army.

Two lessons can be learned from these operations: One, that no fortified line, however ple. They had slavery; and slavery was a strong, will protect an army from an intrepid and audacious enemy, unless vigilantly guarded, the other, that no disaster or misfortune is irreparable, where energy and bravery are displayed in the determination to recover what is lost and to promptly assume the offensive. The Major-General commanding trusts these lessons will not be lost on this Army. In conclusion, the Major-General Commanding desires to return his thanks to those comgreatly due to the practice of carrying deadly mands of the Army not specially mentioned in this order, for the promptitude displayed by all, in their movements to different parts of the lines under the exigencies of the hour. In connection with this subject, the promptitude of Major-Gen. Warren, and of Brevet Major Gen. Hunt, Chief of Artillery, in the early part of the operations, during the accidental absence of the Major-General Commanding, deserve commendation and thanks. GEO. G. MEADE, Maj.-Gen. Command'g. A correspondent on his way to Wilmington

An incident, illustrating the peculiarity of our struggle, occured on our march yesterday. Passing a house by the roadside, a corporal of one of the regiments asked permission to enter it, alleging as the reason for his request that it was the residence of his parents and the home of his youth. His request was granted. He entered the house, and was soon clasped in the arms of the overjoyed mother. "John," said she, "your brother was here yesterday; he stopped as the Confederates marched past here." That mother has a son in each army.

ry, Thompson's Bank Note Reporter, from what it knows of his financial views, cautions all " who operate for high pripes on the theory of paper money, to "stand from under." 'He will,' says that authority, "eareen the country back to a specie basis-safely, if he canbut he will careen it in that direction anyhow. His whole financial history has been of stringent character. His views now are that the government itself is the greater lostr by the wide difference betweeen paper money and gold ;and, more than all, he knows how to lessen the difference ; and the admonishing feature is, he has not one particle of sympathy for those who have run in debt on this paper money basis, nor for those who have bought gold and property because of the depreciation in currency.

The Pittsburg Commercial in commenting upon this, says that Mr. McCulloch, as Secretary of the Treasury, will be subject to the law of necessity, growing out of the condition of the country. His personal views will amount to but little. He may desire to return to a specie basis to-morrow, but he can no more do so than fly. If he should attempt it he will fail. It is gratifying to be idformed of his conservatism in finance; but that will not be a wise conservatism that attempt) a revolution and thereby creates a panic, which a too speedy contraction would do. The country is in no condition for that. If the expansion of paper to the present volume was unwise, any attempted contraction not marked by moderation will entail worse evils. We are in situation when to return is nearly as difficult he to go over, if there is such a thing in the case. The process of reduction must be gradual to be safe. A violent decline of gold would practically, to the extent of the decline, extinguish values .-Fortune and credit would be shaken, if not crushed. While cheap prices would be the result, the ability to buy would be more than correspondingly diminished, with broken courage and universal distrust added.

The passage of the Emancipation Ordinance has been followed by a rush of Eastern capitalists and others to to the Stite of Missouri. Heavy purchases of lands hive been made. and a revival of emigration of a large scale is contidently predicted. It is stated that in Clark and Adair counties more land has changed bands in the last three months than in the previous four years. Trains and hotels are becoming crowded, and altogether Missouri appears to be entered apon a new career of prosperity.

It seems to be accorded by the universal consent of mankind that Dr. . G. Ayer & Co.'s Sarsaparilla, Pectoral and Fills are the greatest remedies yet discovered foi the treatment of disease; that Ayer's Sarsayarilla is the great Elizir of Life, which Philomphers have sought for purifying the blood. Ty it and judge for yourselves. à. ×2
