From the correspondence of the New York Herald we take the following exceedingly interesting details of the frightful crime which has overshindowed the whole land with gloom: STATEMENT OF MAJOR BATHBUN.

The President's box at Ford's Theatre is a double one, or what ordinarily constitutes two boxes, in the second tier, at the right of the When occupied by the Presidential party the separating partition is removed, and the two are thus thrown into one. This box is entered from a narrow, dark hall way, which in turn is separated from the dress-circle by a small door. The examination of the premises discloses the fact that the ass()ssin had fully and deliberately prepared and arranged them for his diabolical purpose pri tious to the assembling of the audience. A piece of board one inch thick, six inches wide, and about. three feet in length served for ; bar, one end being placed in an indentation excavated in the wall for the purpose, about for feet from the floor, and the other against the molding of the door panel, a few inches higher than the end in the wall, so that it would be impossible to jar it out of place by knocking on the door on the The demon having thus guarded against intrusion by any of the audience, next proceeded to prepare a means of observing the position of the parties inside the box. With a gimlet or small bit he bored a hole in the door panel, which he afterwards reamed out with his knife, so as to leave it little larger than a buckshot on the inside, while it was sufficiently large on the outside in the da k entry for him to place his eye against with . Invenience, and see the position occupied by the President and his friends. 'Both box doors'w ire perforated in like manner. But there were spring locks on each of these doors, and it was barely possible that they might be fastered. To provide against such an emergency the screws which fasten the bolt-hasps to the wood bad been partially withdrawn, and left so that while they would hold the hasps to the wood they would afford little or no risistance to a firm pressure upon the door from the outside. Having thus provided for a sure and easy entrance to the box, the next business was to insure a clear and unobstructed passage to the locality of the victim by such an arrangement of the chairs and sofas as would place the other occupents at considerable distance from him. The rooking or easy chair occupied by Mr. Lincoln was found in the front corner of the box farthest from the stages Another, for Mrs. Lincoln, a little more remote from the front, while the other chairs, and a sofa were all placed on the side neare t the stage, leaving the centre of the spaciou, box clear for the bloody operations of the actor. These preparations were neither conceived by a maddened brain, designed by a fool, nir executed by a drunkard. They bear most unmistakable evidence of genius, industry, and perseverance in the perfect accomplishment of a deliberate mur-

The deed was perpetrated during the second scene of the third act of the piece, by some man who must have approached stealthily and unseen through the dark passage at the back of the box. Major Rathbun was not aware of his presence till hearing the report of a pistol, and, looking round, saw, the flash, and dimly through the smoke the form of a man in the box, not more than six feet from the President. As the Major sprang towards him he heard him shriek some word like "freedom." He then seized him. The assassin shoof loose from the officer's grasp, and at the satie time made a wielent thrust at his left brea- with the knife which he held in his hand. Major Rathbun caught the blow on his left ard, near the shoulder, and at once sprang for him again, but only succeeded in grasping his clothing, which he partly tore from hi he leaped from the box to the stage. The M jor then gried out "Stop that man," and, supposing it impossible for him to escape through the crowd below, rushed back to the President and to the aid of Mrs. Lincoln, who for the first time Fealized what had occured, was shricking for help. The President had not changed his position, except that his eyes were closed and his head slightly bent forward. Major Rathbun saw at a glance that he was mortally wounded. He went to the door of the bex for the Jarpose of procuring medical aid, and, to his attonishment, found the outer door at the end of the dark hall from which the boxes are entered firmly barred on the inside with a piece of wood wedged across about four feet from the floor, so that those outside who were knocking for admission could not get in. Tearing away the fastenings, and passing in one or two persons who represented themselves as surgeons, he requested Capt. Crawford to prevent all other persons from entering the box, and begged the audience to dis-

When the surgeons had a ancluded their examinations, it was decided in remove the body from the theatre, and accordingly the whole party, including Major Bathbun, who had charge of Mrs. Lincoln, proceeded to a house opposite. It was now found that the Major was seriously wounded, and becoming quite faint from loss of blood. Le was sent home by his surgeon.

The whole time occupied from the firing of the pistol in the box to, the lenping upon the stage was not over thirty seconds. The President never spoke or unclased his eyes from this time until his death. The clothing of Major Rathbun und the dess of Miss Harris were bespattered with block from the wound of the M jor. The wound of the President did not bleed at all.

Miss Harris, who was the box with the President, makes the following statement: Nearly an hour before the commission of the deed the assassin came to the door of the box and looked in to take a survey of the position of its occupants. It was supposed at the time that it was either a mistake or the exercise of impertinent curiosity, and the circumstances attracted no particular atte tion at the time -On entering the box aj lin Major Rathbun arose and asked the intrider "what was his business?" He rushed pas: the Major without making a reply, and placing the pistol close to the back of the President's head fired, and inbox, when he made a backward plunge with his knife aimed at the face or breast of Mr. Lincoln. Major Rathburn springing forward to protect the President, received a stab in his

The murderer then jumped upon the stage and effected his escape. The rapidity with which the act was committed upon the President was astounding. Mrs, Lincoln saw the form of the person go down from the box and thought that Mr. Lincoln had fallen out, and looked to see if she could see him on the floor,

When all was over she turned her eyes to the ror and detestation of the deed. None, other al bridges between Greensborough and Danped upon his breast, and at once realized what had transpired.

The murder of the President was announced at Grover's Theater. Little Thad. living, as a tyrant, a public enemy, and a usur- Morrow, A, A. G. of Gen. From the moment the President was shot up the civilized world. to his death, he was insensible and exhibited no signs of pain, recognized no persons, and, in fact, I believe did not open, his eyes. Blood troubled his breathing, often making it very and all that could be was done for him. Vice the night, but remained only about an hour-

Before he breathed his last about five o'clock this morning, I reached the house where the President lay in his dying agonies. He was the government; and it need not surprise any lying upon his bed apparently breathing with loyal man, if, in a day not far hence, he awake as he had been ever since his assassination; his eyes were protruding from their sockets and suffused with blood. In other respects his countenance was unchanged.

Mrs. Lincoln was under great excitement and agony, wringing her hands and exclaiming, Why did he not shoot me instead of my husband? I have tried to be so careful of him fearing something would happen, and his life seemed to be more precious now than ever; I must go with him," and other expressions of like character. She was constantly going back and forth to the bedside of the President, exclaiming in great agony, "How can it be so?" The scene was heartrending, and it is im-

THE ROAD TO CRIME.

Now that the great sorrow of the nation is fresh in the memory, and the hearts of the people are tender under the painful discipline, it is proper to stand face to face with the crime, and earnestly examine into the conditions and circumstances which made such a tragedy possible in a land of Christian enlightenment; for never, since the cowardly assassination of HENRY IV., has Christendom experienced such a thrill of horror as that which followed the unprovoked murder of ABRAHAN LINCOLN.

Undeniably this crime transcends the scope of ordinary depravity; it is many degrees, in the ascending scale of crime, above the character of common homicide. No ordinary murderer, moved by love of money or personal hatred, ever yaulted from his level up to the altitude of such a crime, by the force of his unaided volition. It was not a blow aimed at the MAN : it was a blow impelled by the concentrated hatred of thousands who had long plotted the destruction of the government, and shus forged into the stupendous crime of Pa-TRICIDE! No wonder the nation reels under the blow of the assassin, Boots; for his band aimed the bullet at its heart. And it sped

We said the crime was the offspring of the concentrated hate of thousands who sought the overthrow of the government, not by open war so much as by dastardly acts of sympathy with those engaged in open war avowedly for its overthrow. Such is the fact. The perpetrator of this crime was a man who had enjoyed the protection of the government from his of surrender, was briefly: A truce between birth. He had never renounced his allegiance -at least in form. The same is true of his accomplices and backers so far as known. The evidence goes to show that the plot was conceived in the North, and was to have been carried out earlier: but the nerves of some of the conspirators failed.

The files of the various Copperhead papers -extending through the Presidential campaign of 1864-inform us how this awful crime became possible. The incendiary harangues of Copperhead leaders afford ample evidence to the same end. As a sample of the more atrocious of these utterances, we give the following from the La Crosse, (Wis.) Democrat of August 29, 1864, which is now being republished widely. Here is the extract:

"The man who votes for Lincoln now is a traitor. Lincoln is a traitor and a murderer. He who pre-tending to war for, wars against the Constitution of our country, is a traitor, and Lincoln is one of these men. He who calls and allures men to certain butchery is a murderer, and Lincoln has done all this.
Had any former Democratic President warred upon

Between these places 33 bridges forth their legitimate fruit. Some of the leading papers, like the World, and News, New York papers, speak of the deed in terms of severest denunciation. We are glad to see this;

that both journals habitually decried Lincoln, Lincoln was in attendance there, and the mo- per. It is not the first time that bad men have ment be heard the statement he seemed to go shrunk back appalled at the violence induced by their counsels. They now deplore him as a man of most merciful heart and mugnanimous soul. They only bespeak the verdict of the President as follows:

Their journals do not all perish on the day of issue: their utterances will not be forgotten, but appear as swift witnesses themselves with the vain hope that their base ness is forgotten. The American people have an Opposition whose partisan hate culminated in the murder of ABRAHAN LINCOLN.

Hon. James Traoy Hale.

The death of this gentleman, briefly noticed last week as baving occurred on the 6th inst., is a public calamity. He had just retired from public life, having served six years in Congress with credit, and honor, and usefulness. It was our privilege to know him well. He was one of those pure, highminded men, who live and die strangers to that ambition which corrupts the heart, debauches the mind, and ages men before their time. A man of conscience, an abhorrer of shams and hypocrites, always true to principle, perhaps no man enjoyed a more universal respect among his peers than he.

He was the ever-willing helper of the helpless, and the "short and simple annals of the poor" were never by him forgotten as soon as heard. The gate to his heart was wide, and without lock or bolt. His manners were pleasing because he was by nature a gentleman. Highly intellectual, scholarly, with attainments which entitled him to a first place among men of culture, he was one of the most modest and least assuming of public men. His pride was noble. Wealth came to him without bringing against which his goodness shone with increasing radiance.

If our enlogy is warm, it is becomes it flows from a knowledge of very many acts of kindness to hundreds who can never publicly thank

WAR NEWS.

The news from Gen. Sherman is not flatter ing to that noble old soldier as a diplomatist. He entered into a sort of armistide with Johnson, by which the practical recognition of the 'rebel machine' was as nearly conceded as one without authority could concede anything not purely military. The basis of the agreement the contending armies; pending which the have volunteered for a war of extermination against arms in their State arsenals: the rebel State Governments were to be recognized and a general amnesty to be proclaimed.

These absurd conditions were sent on to Washington, when President Johnson and the Cabinet canceled them promptly, and as anauthorized and not to be entertained by the United States for a moment. On the contrary, Joe Johnson and his army are to be brought to an unconditional surrender, and such a capitulation as Lee made.

The people may rest assured that Andrew Johnson will stand no nonsense in the winding up of the affairs of the rebellion. No general amnesty will be granted to traitors; no recognition of a rebel government.
