Gaution to Ladies

A young Parisian gentleman traveling to Washington chanced to be seated in the cars rear two very levely young lidies, who, in company with their mammas, wire also pursuing their way to Washington. The old ladies were soon lost to everything but their own interesting conversation.

The young ladies, who were a inted opposite the gentleman, commenced c stting in so sprightly a manner, that Mon eur, thinking that he might be very agreealt entertained, concluded to delade his fair o upanious into the belief that he did not under and English. Whereupon he put on an about octed air, and when the conductor came route o demand the tickets, appeared to be so abouted with his own reflections that it was not until he had been several times spoken to that he noticed the conductor, whom he then addressed in French, and inquired what her wanted. The conductor explained by signs, the ticket was changed, and the young man feturned to his Toveris, 22 Lin

Feeling confident that their ; ale-companion was unable to understand what they said, the young ladies resumed their of versation with incresed vivacity.

MThis young man is very "indsome," said Hush, Kate," said the otla, with a sort of effeight. : "Why, he doesn't know a to d of English; we can talk freely." Kate, if your mother should hear you?" She is busy with her talk; besides, I am free to exercise my opinions, and I say that this young man has beautiful eyes." "They have no expression." has much spirit, and it is a pity he does not speak English; he would chat with us." Would you marry a Frenchman?"

"Why not; if he looks live this one and was spirited, well born and biable. But I can hardly keep from laughin See, he doesn't mistrust what we are saying. At a new station, the cond stor came again for the tickets. Our young han, with extra elaboration and in excellent haglish, said, Ah, you want my ticket: Very well; let me see I believe it is in my orte-mounsie. *Oh, yes, here it is."

The effect of the coup de-thatre was startling. Rate nearly fainted, bet soon recovered under the polite apologies of the young Frenchman. They were pleased wit each other, and in a few weeks, Kate ratified er good opinion of the young man and her wi ingness to marry a Frenchman.

"Axe Grinding."—This it a term borrowed from one of the most charm, g stories told by Benjamin Franklin. A lit a boy going to sphool was accosted by a me coarrying an ax.

The man calls the boy all kinds of pretty and andearing names, and inducer him to enter a -yard where there is a grind tone. "Now, my pretty little fellow," says he with the ax, "only turn that handle, and you'll tee something pret-The boy turns, and turns, and the man holds the ax to the stone and pours water over it until the axe is ground. Straightway he turns with strident voice and fierce gesture on the boy: "You abandoned the miscreant," he cries, "what do you mear y playing truant from school? You deserve good thrashing.
