" No doubt can rest in histor , that at the time of the Chicago Convention, the Democratic party in the North had predared a secret programme of operations, the fingl and inevitable conclusion of which was the acknowledgement of the independence of the Confete die States .-It was proposed to get to this conclusion by distinct and successive steps, so as not to alarm too much the Union sentiment of the country. . The first step was to be the proposition of the " Union as it was" in a Conversion of States ; if that was voted down, then the proposition of a new principal of federation, limited to the foreign relations and to the revenue; if that was rejected, then the propositions of an interconfederate Union to preserve, is far as possible. by an extraordinary league, the American prestige; and if all these propositions, intended as successive tests of the spirit of the Fouth, were to fail, then at last the independence of the confederate states, made the sine .qua non, was to be conceded by the Democratic party of the North, and the last resort of pacification, and the one of two alternatives where their choice could no longer hesitate. It will be seen from this eketch of the programme that the design of the Democratic party was tr get the North on the naked issue of war and deparation. "The plan utterly failed in execution .-The fall of Atlanta gave a new lease to the war. And, aside from that event, it would have fallen through from the incoherence of the materials which, at that time, composed the Democratic party. In fact, the party, like all other Yankee minorities, we't to pieces, and was swallowed up in the Presidential election, and may be said to have practically disappeared since then, from the political arena, where if it shows itself at all now, it is only in mock comibst."
