One not familiar with our town might suppose from our frequent references to bridges, that the town, like Venice, was a "sea-girt islani," a sort of city on a sea. Indeed we are blessed, or cursedas one chooses to have it-with our full complement of bridges. We also have a goodly supply of terra firma-as the faces, feet and hands of scores of our healthy dirt-reveling young America will testify,not to digress from bridges to dirty faces—Mr. Perry Marcy, who has the contract for the construction of the Borough bridge at the "east end," we are told pushing on the work with all possible dispatch, in order to make a safe and convenient passage for the crowds of people who are turning their attention to the extensive stock of Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware and general merchandise now kept at the store of Bunnell & Bannatyne in Stark's brick block on Tioga street.

Which for some months past have been in such condition as to furnish a subject for bitter, and sometimes unreasonable complaints, are now being put in such condition as will oblige all croakers on canal bridges to hunt up another theme on which they may gratify their morbid, emplaining propensities.

Three entirely new bridges of good width, built in the very best manner, and of the very best material, are now being put up,

With all persons familiar with the facts in relation to the bridges, the company are less deserving of censure for what may have appeared to some, an unexcusable neglect than these chronic complainers will allow. We shall probably advert to this subject some future time, in order to show that there has been but little reason for the censure which has been so freely bestowed upon the company. While it is a fact that many of our citizens and business men have suffered much inconvenience for want of the lower bridge, it also is a fact that they made less complaint than some of those busy bodies who were actually benefitted by having trade and travel diverted toward their basiness places.

We are under many obligations to several friends which they have manifested in a pactical businesslike manner by calling the attention of their friends forts to make our paper a necessity in every household in the county, we have greatly increased its circulation and consequent usefulness since August | To all fair minds this must be conclusive

The scene was eminently suggestive, and called to our mind the following stanza, said to have originated with a poet in one of his bacchanalian reveries. The sentiment rather than the poetry is suggestive :-"Leaves have their time to fall, so have I;

But the difference 'twixt the leaves and me Is, that I falls harder and more frequently.

Sensible women, in this region, select their street-succepts from the immense stock of new and elegant-styles of dress goods now on exhibition at the store of Sherman & Lathrop, one door below rhetoric and scathing satire, as he who signs himself J. W. Rhodes-omitting the M. D., because he has no legitimate right to use it !

My position was taken not against any individual, but against the oil, whether sold in Tunkhannock, Meshop pen, Mehoopany or elsewhere-confident that science and experiment would uphold me. I am willing to fight it out on that line; and you shall see who should retract, and who " is profoundly ignorant of the laws of chemical combinations." J W. R. is no doubt the possessor of much olium cum dignitate. And all admit that his effort exhibits rare attainments, surprising fairness and intelligence Pitt spoke once upon " the crime of being a young man;" and to be called "innocent and unoffensive" is decidedly complimentary ! He very correctly assumes that I do not know that benzine joined with the other constituents of his oil becomes non-explosive. On the contrary I can prove that its character is essentially unchanged. I have satisfied witnesses that this oil and benzine act very similarly: that an inflamable gas may be generated from each by slight heat, &c The proper appa-Vendue bills have been printed at this office, for ratus for proving further than this, and conclu-

Could anyon ask for a plainer example of " honesty Persons wishing to purchase the stock and articles undone?" I also have statements quite as credita mentioned, will make a note of days and places of the as his, that the Eureka will not burn so long as glas Kerosene, and its illuminating properties are certain ly inferior. None but scientific individuals will appreciate fully his essay on oxygen- capital illustra tion, only it applies on the wrong side !- for oxyget is not chemically combined (though intimately mixed with nitrogen) in the atmosphere; and I can convince anyone who will call, that if benzine be at all combined in his oil, the affinity is so slight that a moderate degree of heat will disengage it in the form of vapor or gas. Still that illustration is about as relevant as the jumbled fable.

Practical arguments are not wanting I could ention several prominent cases in which the oil was tried and abandoned, even before its public condemnation. They did not like its behavior. Now I can enumerate others, if necessary. It is simply safe as benzine which all know to be the unsafe part obtained from crude petroleum during the process of

There may be those who doubt my authority in this matter, and will not satisfy themselves by seeing the incomplete experiments I am prepared to make. Allow me therefore to offer an extract from a letter written by Mr C. P. Matthews, a practical chemist, one of the firm of Matthews Bros., oil dealers Scranton, Pa. I have no doubt I can elicit any de sirable amount of similar testimony from the highest authorities. And I assure J. W. R. that it was not in different parts of the County who have recently written out of "malice" toward him, for his fame taken an interest in the success of the Democrat, has never reached so far. Mr. Matthews says: The Eureka oil or any other oil that has any Benzine, Gascline, Benzole or Naptha in its composition and neighbors to the importance of subscribing for it | will explode; and, in my opinion, the man does not By the aid of these true friends, and by our own ef- live who can combine anything with the lightest portion of Petroleum (which is Benzine) that will make it non-explosive."
