

Farm Garden & Kitchen.

Farmers, and Agricultural men generally are requested to contribute to this Department, as it is from their experience that we hope to gain something of interest for our readers.

Pork.—In selecting swine for fattening purposes, it is safest not to make choice of long backs, or hollow ones. These may, in time, become large hogs, but it will take much corn or other food to fatten them well. Generally, hogs, when fattened, will weigh from three to four hundred pounds, are the most profitable and make the most desirable pork, either for domestic use, or for the market.

Some say that pig pork, being young and tender, does not spend as well, or last as long, as the flesh of old hogs. It may be so; one reason, however, may be, that, being sweet and tender, the members of a family are more disposed to partake of it than a different kind.

We have known some dairy women who had the knack of making butter that would last the family a long time; indeed, one-p and would linger as long upon the table as two pounds of sweet butter.

Most housekeepers in every village can conveniently keep one pig through summer and autumn from the refuse of their gardens and the waste of their tables. The purchase of two or three bushels of Indian corn one month before the slaughtering, and given them partly in the shape of scalded meal, may be all the actual cost required. And a well fattened, plump, sweet pig or ten scores, about Thanksgiving time, is no unacceptible contribution to the meat room, or the cellar.

UTILIZING WASTE.—In the operations of the farmer, the great secret of his success is the facility and cheapness of the manure heap which is made out of the waste materials that accumulate or exist about him.—This material is always accumulating, and where agriculture is badly carried on, there is usually a proportionate neglect of manures. A country is impoverished in its agriculture just in proportion as its crops are removed and the waste is unsupplied to the soil now undergoing exhaustion. Hence a country that carries its products to the city, and where the waste of the city is allowed to run into the sea, is in great danger of being run out.

Like nature herself, the farmer should allow nothing to run to waste. He must learn to utilize everything. The ancients when engaged in mining operations frequently performed their work very unskillfully, and it is said that the silver mines that were wrought in Greece in the days of Xenophon are now worked over again by making use of the waste materials of that day. Poor farming only partially uses the waste materials of the farm; good farming wastes the whole, just as the skillful miner works out all the gold from the ore. It is hard finding a farmer at the present day who will allow a stream to run through his barn-yard and carry off his liquid manure or who will set fire to his heaps of straw, or who will allow his chip-yard to accumulate load after load of refuse matter. These faults of the farmer are rarely to be seen at the present day, but the great question will arise in the minds of most farmers, how they shall treat their manures and how they shall treat them.

An important rule is to make the manure heap a common receptacle of every thing otherwise useless about the house and barn. It is surprising how great an accumulation of manure attentive farmers can make by watching every opportunity to save it.

How a Farmer may Loose Money.—By not taking a good home paper.

Keeping no account of home operations. Paying no attention to the good maxim, "A stitch in time saves nine," in regard to the sowing of grain and planting of seed at the proper time.

Leaving reapers, plows, cultivators, etc., uncovered from the rain and heat of the sun. More money is lost this way than most people are willing to believe.

Permitting broken implements to be scattered over the farm until they are irreparable. By repairing broken implements at the proper time many dollars may be saved, a proof of the assertion that "time is money."

Attending the auction sales and purchasing all kinds of trumpery, because in the words of the vendor, the articles are "very cheap."

Allowing fences to remain unrepaired until strange cattle are found grazing in the meadow, grain fields, or bruising the fruit trees.

Disbelieving the principal of a rotation of crops, before making a single experiment.

Planting fruit trees with the expectation of having fruit, without giving the trees half attention needed to make them profitable.

Practicing economy by depriving stock of proper shelter during winter, and giving them unsound food, such as half rotten and mouldy hay and fodder.

Keeping unnumberable tribes of rats on the premises, and two or three lazy dogs that eat up more in a month than they are worth in a whole life-time.

And, lastly, he loses by not reading the advertisements of those who patronize the printer, they being invariably the most enterprising and liberal houses to deal with, when he goes to town.

FOUND, or can be found at Lyman & Wells, Tunkhannock, Penn., and all other dealers, the Dr. J. W. Rhoads' EXHAUSTIVE SWISS PREPARATION.

and is the best, cheapest, most powerful Liniment ever offered to the public, for man or horse. It has been used for many years in England, by the leading barbers, and they have had the greatest success with it of any Liniment ever used for the cure of horses.

Those who have horses that are swelled or lame, have swollen joints, sprains, bruises, old sores, flesh cuts, collar galls, &c. should try this Liniment and they will be convinced that it is superior to all other known preparations.

If it does not give good satisfaction, return the bottle half full, and your money will be refunded. Put up in convenient form, and sold by all Druggists and Storekeepers at 50 cents a bottle. Don't fail to call for the Great English Sweeney Liniment.

Manhood: How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of SPERMATORRHOEA, or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc. also, Consumption, Epilepsy, and Fits, induced by self-indulgence of sexual extravagance.

Price is what his envelope, only 6 cents.

The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Sent, under seal, in a plain envelope, or two post stamps, postpaid, on receipt of six cents, or any post price. Also, Dr. Culverwell's "Marriage Guide," price 25 cents. Address the Publishers.
