FALLING TIMBER-TREES.

Trees for fuel may be cut down in any manner that they can be brought down most expeditiously. But timber trees, expecially very large ones, need to be managed with some skill and judgment, or the butt log may be much damaged The problem is to fell the tree with as little laor as practicable, without damaging the timber. Most trees lean a trifle; but unless a tree leans more than twice the diameter of its body, at the height of forty or fifty feet from the ground, it will be easy to fall it in any desired direction without damaging the butt by splitting, or pulling out long splinters.

When there is danger that the butt may way to saw a tree down is to run the saw half way, or more, through, first on the side where the tree is to fall. Then saw the opposite side. and keep the kerf open with broad and thin wedges.

When felling a valuable timber-tree with axes, let the largest kerf, or chip, be token on the side where the tree is to fall. And to prevent splitting, leave the outside until the heart is entirely cut off

A long spring-pole may be used to throw a tree in a given direction when it cannot be done by a skillful shape of the kerf.

WATER-TROUGHS FOR STOCK.

A great many people who endeavor to take care of their animals in the best possible manner are not aware how much many of them suffer in cold weather, for want of a supply of water. In many instances, ten or more horned cattle are watered in a tub or small trough that will not hold a barrel of water; and frequently so much ice accumulates in the trough, that half a dozen pailsful will fill the space left for water. A boy, perhaps, who never reflected whether a cow or a bullock would drink one ga lon of water, or five, is directed to water the stock. He draws as much as the tub or trough will contain and is then off. The result is, three or four of the master's animals empty the trough, while haif the herd get none. The remedy is to provide a more spacious receptacle. Ten cows or bullocks, or ten horses, will often drink two pail-ful or six gallons each and even then have a stinted supply. Some large cows will require twelve to fifteen gallons each; and they will not yield a full flow of milk if such a vuanity of pure water is not supplied. A trough where ten full-grown animals are watered should be expacious enough to hold not less than five barrels of water. Then, when ice accumulates on the inside, it should be cut out every day, so that the trough may be filled with water instead of ice. Troughs where sheep drink are al most always to small to contain a. supply

MOULTING CANARIES .- When your canary birds are moulting and cease to sing, do this: Put a little oxide of iron (iron rus from the drug store) or let a couple of lath nails be in the water they drink; take away their bath, so that they cannot get any drink but their medicine. In another cup immerse a little saffron. The iron braces their systems while moulting. In a little while they will sing loud enough to

A great many hard working men, who have never been accustomed to commit their ideas to paper, understand that any kind of firewood, or timber that is being split into ovenwood, or riven into staves, or wagonspokes, will separate much more easily when split "slab fashion" than when separated in the direction from the log or stick. Their is a philosophical reason for this. When a stick is split 'slab fashion,' the parts are separated between the animal concentric circles of the tree, one of which is formed every growing season. The union between these annual layers, or rings of woods, is not so perfect as it is between the particles which form a ring or circle of the wood. Inexperience laborers and boys do not always understand how much advantage may be taken of their hard labor, when splitting wood, by understanding this fact. When a log is sawed into short cuts, to split into fire wood, two iron wedges and a beetle would be necessary to open a cut through the heart. But by taking off thin slabs, most of the splitting may be done with only an axe. Sugar maple sometimes is so difficult to split through the heart, that a laborer may drive in all the wedges and gluts without being able to open a log four feet long; whereas, were the cut slabbed, and splitting could be performed with comparatively little labor Then, after a log is split into thin slabs the labor of splitting the slabs the other way will be comparatively light.

SEEDS .- Many farmers hesitate to put weed in the manure heap, because the seeds grow and become troublesome; but, if fer mentation is encouraged, as it should be, vitality is destroyed. Seeds of weeds that have undergone any fermentation, will never germinate. Some on the outside of a heap may not get exposed to the fermentation in the interior, and such of course may grow; but this only shows that the heap should be turned over occasionally to destroy them; and as this turning over is a benefit to the manure any how, it may be an argument in favor of the use of weeds, that they will compel one to do what should be done in any event.

Rats and mice will not board long in corn crib odorous with the fumes of coal gas tar; neither can they be happy among sheaves of oats slightly sprinkled with

when there is danger that the butt may split, a timber tree should never be felled the way it leans, but let it be cut to fall either to the right or to the left of the direction the top leans.

When trees are sawed down, they should never be sawed to fall the way they lean as the but will almost always split badly and damage the timber. The best way to saw a tree down is to run the saw of the split and the saw are sawed to fall the way they lean as the but will almost always split badly and damage the timber. Hair Vigor, For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color. A dressing which is at once agreeable. healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain car be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous Its occasional use will prevent the mair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted

nothing else can be found so desirable Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet has long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.
