A farmer who always has sleek cattle, pursues this course : He feeds his stock their meal or roots early in the morning, without any hay, and turns them out about sucrise, and feeds hay either in the yard or at the adjoining stack---putting them back in their stalls as early as four P. M, stormy or extreme cold weather excepted, when shey are kept housed most of the time.

SOAKING SEEDS .- The Chinese seldom sow a crop without having previously soaked their seeds in diluted manure, keeping them there even until they begin to sprout They hold that this not only gives the plants an early and vigorous start, but preserves the seeds from worms or birds. The practical results of Chinese agriculture are contempt. Would it not be well for us to use some safe steeps for our corn, squashes mellons, etc., as a general use, and not as an exception?

DESTROYING WORMS IN POTS .- The worms in the pots may be destroyed by stopping up the holes in the pots with corks watering with lime water until it stands on the surface. The lime water may remain an hour; then, on removing the cork, it will pass off. The lime water may be made pouring thirty gallons of water over ten pounds of fresh time. Stir well up, and allow the whole to stand two or three days; then employ the clean liquor.

WATERED CIDER .-- A party of men were surveying for a railroad, and of course they are entitled to the best there is along the line. At one house they thought the proprietor was a little tardy in producing the cider. It came at last, and was tasted by one of party with great deliberation, "How much cider did you make this year?" he asked. "Fifteen barrels," was the answer Another sip. "Well, if you'd had another apple you might have made another bar-

CATTLE AND Hogs .- Beef cattle should be fed freely on pumpkins, boiled corn, and mixed cut feed. Don't feed ripe pumpkins to milch cows without first removing the seeds, as they promote the se cretion of the kidneys and cut short the flow of milk. Hogs for market should be strong fed this month -not quite as much as they will eat, but as much as they can digest well. Hogs that are being fatted should have a mess of potatoes boiled in CORNER OF COURT HOUSE SQUARE, slops from the kitchen at least once a Sheep require about three per cent. of their live weight of hay or its equivalent per day, that is, about three pounds for sheep weighing in the neighborhood of one hundred pounds. But it is not good economy to confine them to hav They do better on a variety of alone. food, and roots of some kinds may be regarded as essential to their thrift, If regularly supplied with turnips or other roots, they will readily consume the stalks and straw and do well on them, while without roots they require good hay.

The Hearth and Home says: In feeding farm animals, remember that when you place food before an animal, it is eaten for three purposes: to give muscular strength, to supply heat, or to make fat or butter. The more a cow consumes to supply muscular waste, the less goes to milk. The more she needs to keep herself warm, the less she can yield of milk Coarse, rough food, as swamp hay, butts of corn stalks, and straw yield some starch or carbon. This is the reason why an animal in an open shed will eat trash which it would reject in a warm stable. Yet there is nothing gained by star-ving them to rough fodder. Good shelter would be cheaper. The richer the food in albumen, the more vigor and muscle it will make. The farmer gains more by a few high-fed animals than from much half-starved, ill-housed stock.

SMALL BED CHAMBERS ---- There is reason to believe that more cases of dangerous and fatal diseases are gradually engendered annually by the habit of sleeping in small. unventilated rooms, than have occured from a cholera atmosphere during any year since it made its appearance in this country Very many persons sleep in eight by ten rooms, that is, in rooms the length and breadth of which multiplied together, and this multiplied again by ten for the height of the chamber would make just eight hundred cubic feet, while the cubic feet for each bed, according to the English apporionment for hospitals, is twenty-one hundred feet.

But more, in order " to give the air of a room the highest degree of freshness," the French hospitals contract for a complete renewal of the air of a room every hour, while the English assert that double the amount, or over four thousand feet an hour is required. Four thousand feet of air every hour! and yet their are multitudes in the city of New York who sleep with closed doors and windows in rooms which do not contain a thousand cubic feet of space, and that thousand feet is to last all night, at least eight hours, except such scanty supplies as may be obtained of any fresh air that may insinuate itself through little crevices by door or window, not an eight of an inch in thickness, But when it is known that in many cases a man and wife and infant sleep habitnally in thousandfeet rooms, it is no marvel that multitudes perish permaturly in cities; no wonder that infant children wilt away like flowers without water, and that five thousand of them are to die in the city New York alone during the hundred days which shall include thefifteenth of July in every year. Another fact is suggestive, that among the fifty thousand persons who sleep night ly in the lodging houses of London. expressly arranged on the improned principles of space and ventilation already referred to it has been proved that not one single case of fever has been engendered in two years! Let every intelligent reader improve the teachings of this article with: out an hour's delay.

healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed: But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a
