PAVABLE. The Cavalry wing of the Sem-Annually, which the cavalry wing of the premium on manner to exceed that for any that PER ANNO organized by any government. He Formed that the means for the suppression of and any knowledge must be those of celerity as well as energy, rapid movements as well as heavy blows.

He claimed that in a year, unless this was done, it would be impossible to resist the forces which the traitors would spread over a vast territory, thus exhausting immense numbers of men; wrecking the Quartermaster and depleting the Commissariat, without affecting any real or practical object. Since then, there has been proven that Gen. Cameron was right; and now the press of the country is acknowledging his sagacity and foresight, by insisting that the Government should do the very things which Gen. C. proposed a year ago.

The want of cavalry, in many instances since the beginning of the rebellion, has been sorely felt; and it is doubted whether at any time this branch of the service has been sufficiently ample. Why, in the organization of our armies, the cavalry force should be disproportionately small to infantry and artillery, is not quite clear. It is believed that at no time during the present conflict has the mounted force been adequate, nor in proportion to other branches of the service; and, therefore, its increase now, under control of Mr. Stanton, is regarded as a step clearly in the right direction.

During the term of Mr. Cameron, as Secretary of War, this arm was assuming considerable dimensions; but not necessarily large, and the sheer cry of extravagance was raised, and the she cry of extravagance was raised, and the sheer cry of extravagance was raised, and the sheer cry of extravagance was raised.

Mr. Cameron has several branches of the estimates for the service that it would require a million the proposition the rebellion. Upon this point of men to crush and among other things he contemplates; for arms and equipments. This was largely materialized as extravagance, and a great change was raised—and in order to quiet this clamor, a change in the War Department became necessary, and Mr. Stanton was selected to succeed Mr. Cameron.

SHED FAITH IN... THE MITE DEMOCRACY. The Mite Democracy is a party of New York is gathering of itself strength, wherewith to influence, talin, also, dictate to, or browbeat every man, the every aspirant for power. This spirit is being noticed by the newspaper press of the whole country, many of which are publicly and severely denouncing the arrogance it presents.

But leaders of the so-called Democratic party in the North, and especially those of the city of New York, stand self-exhibited as political hypocrites. When the war began with the attack on Sumter, when the life of the nation was threatened by assassination, these men began to sound the cry of No Party. They had been fairly and squarely beaten in the most exciting political canvass the country had ever known.

A Republican President had just been inaugurated, and the thousand spoilsman who had held obnoxious office under Mr. Buchanan saw that they might be ejected from their profitable employments or snug sinecures. "When the Devil was sick, the Devil a monk would be." When these people saw their doom impending they assumed the saintliness of perfect patriotism; they cried No Party; and spoke with touching or turgid tones of the evident sinfulness which would be shown by the successful Republicans if they should venture to take a victor's advantage of a victory.

There was something altogether lovely in this language. It sounded like an echo from some past Era of Good Feeling; and many simple souls forget that it was of necessity the utterance of mere hypocrisy. "Are figs of thistles, or grapes of thorns?" Could a band of partisans, who were pro slavery in a free State, merely that they might attain elevation by their alliance with Southern secessionists, so forget their nature and chasten their lusts as to bear suddenly the sweet fruits of disinterested patriotism? By no means.

The movement began in Wall street among some who knew McClellan personally, as a railroad man. Among them were such people as Watts Sherman, August Belmont, Samuel L. M. Barlow, and the like, who in '59 helped to get up the "Fifth Avenue Hotel Democratic Vigilant Association," and wrote a silly address in regard to John Brown, wherein they willfully libelled Gerrit Smith, and were afterwards compelled by that peaceful philosopher to eat their own words at the point of a law suit. In due time these spars but opulent ranks of republicans were reinforced by the lower orders of the Democracy party, the dirty cohorts of the Fifth Avenue, more struck hands with the Fifth Avenue, the Herald with its headlong twaddle, and the Journal of Commerce with its sleeker and more dangerous, because more decent rhetoric, were set to work to puff McClellan into preparation for the Presidency.

The effect was soon visible. Two years ago in certain drawing-rooms and in certain grog-shops in New York, it was a crime to criticize slavery. Of late, in the same places, it has been a crime to criticize McClellan, to say that he has no acquisitions but not genius; that he is a splendid drill-master, but not a commander; that he can prepare an army for the field, but cannot lead it to successful results. To give by utterance to such views, in the mildest manner, has been, in those drawing-rooms, a social heresy; in the grog-shops a signal for assault.

Of course, with the recent "Democratic" successes in New York and elsewhere, the proclivities of the no party cry has passed away. "When the devil got well, the devil a monk was he." The hungry officials who became so particularly neutral in '61, may now comfort themselves with crumbs from State and national tables, and nourish their muscle for the struggle of '64. They no longer bug us to forget party; they are for party now, and nothing else. The country is to be saved, not by pulling the rebels, but by abusing the radicals; his liberty can be secured only as fast as we, by carrying on the war with every advantage, achieve the control of the country where the slaves abide. This is understood by the negro in his bondage as well as by us. He will, therefore, wait patiently for the hour of his release, believing that while Abraham Lincoln holds to the doctrine of his proclamation, the good time will be sure to come sooner or later. Annual that proclamation, as the frightened conservatives would have Mr. Lincoln do, and who will be answerable for the consequences? Servile insurrection would be the almost certain result of so ill-timed a step. No human being rises to minister vengeance upon those who do him favors, whether the favor is voluntary, and comes from the individual tyrant's own volition, or is extorted from him by external causes over which he can exercise no control.

How was it in the British West Indies? The slave there understood that his master gave him liberty per force of English law, enacted thousands of miles away in the little island of the seas. Did the slaves in those islands rise and kill their masters, who yielded to this outside pressure with extreme reluctance, but nevertheless yielded? Not at all. They received the boon of freedom with uplifted hearts to God in solemn prayer, and not with murderous hands against their former masters. This is history, and it is human nature the world over. And it is worth infinitely more in settling a question like this than any amount of theorizing and speculation, such as the fearful and quaking conservatives are wont to put forth.

It is only when you cut of a man's freedom, or attempt to enslave him to the rule of despotism, that he resist you unto blood. This is the lesson of San Domingo. It is the lesson, also, of history, ever since the world began. Let then the timid and mistaken conservatives, who would induce the President of the United the "Radicals," the "Abolitionists," and the "madness which rules at Washington," and spends its time apparently in uttering bursts of "derivative laughter," are denounced as the source of all our woes, and simple readers are deceived accordingly.

At any other time, such tergiversation would be wholly funny, but in such a crisis as this we submit that it is evidence of hypocrisy so wicked and malignity so selfish that there is not language adequate to their characterization. We say nothing of McClellan as a soldier; we say nothing of the late disaster, or its causes; but we do say that the men who try to make either the former or the latter an instrument for forwarding their selfish schemes, are worthy, simply, of abhorrence.

As the time for the assembling of the next State Legislature is rapidly approaching, the Democracy are busily engaged in hunting up a candidate to succeed the Hon. David Wilmot in the United States Senate. It seems that the Democrats claim but one majority on joint ballot in the Legislature, and that they have been, and perhaps still are, overthrown by Simon Cameron, or some other anti-Buchanan-Breckenridge candidate. We do not know what grounds they have for their fears, but the Democracy evidently are afraid they may fall to have a working majority on joint ballot. We hope that, whoever may be elected to succeed Wilmot, he will be a decided Union man, using all possible means to put down the Rebellion as speedily as possible.—Perry County Freeman.

Of course, if a decided Union man is to be elected, it must be one other than any of those who have pushed their names forward as having claims on the Democratic party. There are no decided Union men among the leaders of the Democratic party. Every aspirant for office, who asserts an adhesion to that organization, is a semi-secessionist, who seeks power solely for the opportunity of aiding rebel slave-holding Democrats to destroy a Federal Administration. To elect a man from such a party to the United States Senate—to give such a man power and influence in the highest legislative branch of the Government, would be equal to placing one of Jeff. Davis' spies on the staff of Lincoln, where he could become acquainted with and frustrate the plans of the commanding General of the army.

From Washington, Dec. 26. A letter from Suffolk, Va., dated 23d inst., states that the election for members of Congress took place the day before, according to the proclamation of Gen. Dix. Contrary to the laws of Virginia, ballots were cast instead of voting tickets. In order to give the people at Smithfield an opportunity to show their attachment to the Union, two ballot boxes were ordered, commanding two hundred of the First New York Mounted Rifles and a couple of howitzers.

Seeing that the enemy would be anxious to visit the polls, Col. Onderdonk sent the boxes direct to Smithfield in charge of a small squad, and proceeded with the remainder of his command to Windsor. Learning that the enemy, in considerable force, had left the place but a short time before, he proceeded cautiously toward Isle of Wight, and when about three miles out, came up with them. He sent his compliments in the shape of shell from his howitzers, and they responded handsomely with a six pounder.

A short skirmish revealed one regiment of Infantry, two pieces of artillery and some cavalry. Lieut. Col. Onderdonk, with it, would not have been able to hold the place, had he not retired. The rebels then attempted to surround him, and at one time were only one mile and fifty yards in his rear, when he ordered his command about and fired at which emptied twenty of their saddles in time. Skirmishing continued for six miles. Two prisoners and one horse were taken. None of our men were lost or injured. It thought it will be a long time before the election returns will come from Smithfield. Names of our command: 26 for Mr. Cooper, 12 for McCloud and 1 scattering.

CAPTURE OF PAPERS BELONGING TO THE REBEL MAURY. Washington, Dec. 25. A number of papers belonging to L. M. F. Maury, late of the United States Navy, and at present in the hands of the rebels, were sent to the authorities at first, they said it would be put down in a few days. It then in his hands, and through England should be sent to the United States. He offered us, around the banks of the Tennessee, under the name of his gunboats, &c.

Maury says the powers of Europe have decided with regard to the blockade. It never been effective. In the course of the letter, he says: "Here then is the spectacle of people, twelve millions in number, seeking separate themselves from an association they abhor, to cut loose from a government they hate, seeking and meaning to take the place as an independent sovereignty among the nations of the earth. They occupy one of the finest countries in the world, adapting their industrial pursuits, according to the principles that regulate the distribution of labor over the surface of the planet; they are eminently agricultural. The letter, which is a very long one, is an argument to show that great commercial advantages would result to Europe by recognizing the Confederate Government."
