After a moment he repeated his question, "Who says we have no traitors in our midst ?" and then as if to assure us of his sincerity, he went on with an answer to his own inquiry by earnestly asserting, "I say we have !" The explanation of all this was to the effect, that our loyal friend, while passing one of our most prominent hotels, heard temporary answers the foregoing question in the following lively manner :- Buy a Sewing Machine, of course. We trust that the day is over in which needle drudgery sets a feeble opposi-tion to the musical clink of the Wheeler & Wilson machine. A lady who says she does not know how to use a sewing machine is looked upon with as much distrust as a lady who says she don't like babies. Side by side, in every home, we see the piano and the sewing machine. Of course, people have a right to their preterences but give us the merry little musician whose crystal eye and silver tongue not only fill the ear with melody, but set the pulses of life and health throbbing anew in the weary hearts of a million women. Is it not better than all the planos ever tuned? Some of the newest improvements to the Wheeler & Wilson machine are the binder, braider and broder, all of which ladies find indispensable. The braider is par-ticularly appropriate to the present mania for decorating everything, with braid. "I do not now what we should do without the Wheeler & Wilson Braider," said the director of one o our fashionable mantilla establishments, when we inquired how those tasteful labyrinths of braid were laid on, and his words are echoed n every home in the land. Really, we scarcel in every nome in the land. . hearly, we scattery know which blessing to wish our young lady friends—a Wheeler & Wilson machine or a hus-band !.
