Rebei Advice and Copperhead Response

"The success of the Democratic party would be no longer doubtful, should Gen. Lee once more advance on Meade. Let him drive Meade into Washington and he will again raise the spirits of the Democrats, confirm their timid and give confidence to their wavering -RICHMOND ENQUIRER.

"We must arouse ourselves, and reassert the RIGHTS OF THE SLAVEHOLDER, and ADD such GUAR-ANTEES to our Constitution as will protect his property from the spoilation of religious bigotry or persecution, or else we must give up our Constitution and Union .-GEO. W. WOODWARD.

The Way to Cheer the Army under Rose crans.

If there is a hero in the field who hates a copperhead and abhors a traitor, it is the gallant Rosecrans. He is as ready to denounce a copperhead as he is to meet a traitor in mortal combat. Within a weak past, Rosecrans has proven how able and willing he is to meet the enemies of the Union in mortal fight. His late battle was the fiercest ever fought. In that struggle Rosecrans and his gallant followers of course suffered severely, and now want all the sympathy and encouragement at the command of loval men at home. Nav. whether they suffered or not, their gallant deeds demand our warmest admiration. That we can give at the polls. We can send to Rosecrans and his gallant army, greetings, that Pennsylvania is true to the Union-faithful to the soldiers who fight its battles, and ready to fight down any influence which the copperheads may attempt to create to give aid and comfort to the traitors by whom Resecrans is now confronted. A victory in Pennsylvania and Ohio, will be worth whole brigades to Rosecrans, Grant and Burnside. If it can go forth to the Southern rebels that their allies in New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio have been defeated at the polls-it the rebel government can be taught to believe that there is an overwhelming sentiment in these three powerful free States, in favor of supporting the National authority and putting down rebellion at all hazards and all costs of life and treasure—if this can be fairly shown as it will be by the defeat of Woodward, in Pennsylvania, and Vallandigham in Ohio, the Davis oligarchy would become as impotent as a Tory Organ falsehood, while the armed ragamuffins who have been supporting its authority would not be able to fight another battle for

What man in Pennsylvania will refuse to send greeting to Rosecrans, Grant and Burnside. that the Old Keystone State sympathizes with each and their followers, in the sacrifices all are making for the Union and the Government? That greeting would be the signal for the closing of the war. In fact all that is now needed to end the rebellion is the united influ. ence of the free States, cast through the ballotbox, against it. Will Pennsylvania send her influence in that direction?

Woodward's only hope is in the defeat

Gov. Curtin's Candor.

It is noticed by journals abroad, : a well as by adependent newspaper men at home, that the candor of Gov. In fact, he is a live man, devoted to a policy which can only rescue the land from rebellion, and preserve the State he has Wherever Gov. Curtin speaks, he leaves the impression on all who hear him, that he is conscientiously desirous of contributing to the success of the war against rebellion; that he is wholly devoted to the safety, honor and authority of the National Government. He deals with the necessities which rebellion has created, like a man who understands the danger surrounding the Union, and not like a demagogue who shapes his political action alone to serve his political interests, and who never looks beyond self in the performance of the simplest service. In FROM WASHINGTON fact the whole course and conduct of Gov. Curtin in this campaign stands out in a happy contrast | GEN. GRAHAM EXCHANGED. with that of his opponent. That opponent is of the Golden Circle, finding his way thither over lonely roads, at unusual hours of the night, and in villainous company—Woodward either doing this, or he is being carried, through the State, mute as a mummy, whom the faithful dare only approach and touch, but whose lips are as tightly scaled as are any of the GREAT DISAPPOINTMENT OF THE REBEI dismally dusty long encased mummies that are daily being recovered from the ruins of ancient Thebes.

That speech is a rehash of the slavery as a divine institution, with rights rising decisions with which Black sustained the actions higher than those of all other interests, with privileges which entitle it to a prominence above all other institutions, and with a purpose with an ill grace from Mr. Black at this time, which guarantees it to rebel or resort to treason after it has been proven that he participated for its accomplishment. Such is the difference in all the initial acts of secession, and that he between Gov. A Treasonable Letter.

The Concord (N. H.) Democrat has received of a duty, when he joined with the traitors in from Capt. Wm. H. Gibbs, of the 15th Illinois, Buchanan's administration, in the violation of now at Natchez, Miss., a letter from ex-Presia duty which he was bound by an oath to dis dent Pierce to Mr. Jeff. Davis, written in Janucharge. The unblushing effrontery of this man ary, 1860, and found among the papers of the Black, is only equalled by the impudence of latter at Jackson. It is a valuable contribution to the history of the rebellion, and, though nobody will be surprised that Mr. Pierce should have written it, its publication will be a sore 2,500 prisoners. perplexity to those who insist that the Abolitionists were the instigators of the rebellion, that it was not premeditated by Southern politicians, and that their plans were not known and approved of by their Northern associates. It proves two things conclusively, if anybody still doubts, that the question of secession was the subject of discussion between Northern and Southern Democratic leaders as long ago as January, 1860; and that the proposed Secession ists received assurances from their Northern sympathizers that the rebellion at the South flat. would be aided and enforced by Northern traitors in arms against the Government and the loyal people of the North. The columns of the TRIEGRAPH bear ample evidence that we have more than once insisted that the Democratic leaders of the North offered their alliance, in rebellion, to the leaders of the same party in the South; but we never dreamed while we were thus insisting on what appeared to be plain fact, that its corroboration would come from an ex-President of the United States, himself one of the scamps offering this hellish aid and comfort. We doubt if Jeff. Davis ever received from the most rampant of his Southern fellow-conspirators more unequivocal assurances of sympathy and aid than Franklin Pierce gives him in this letter. It is an evidence of premeditated treason which no words can explain away or excuse. Let loyal Democrats read herein the character of the men to succeeded in rullying about eight thousand of their forces and joined Thomas. Gen. Thomas, finding himself cut off from the right, brought his division into position for independent fighting, his line assuming the form of a horsechoe along the crest of a wooded ridge. He was soon joined by Granger, from Rossville, with a division of Gen. McCook and Gen. Steadman's division, and with these forces firmly maintained the fight until after dark

Our troops were as immovable as the rocks they stood on. The enemy repeatedly hurled against them the dense columns which had couted Davis and Sheridan in the morning; but every onset was repulsed with dreadful slaugh-ter. Falling first on one and then on the other point of our lines, the rebels for hours vainly sought to break them. Gen. Thomas seemed to have filled every soldier with his own un-conquerable firmness; and Gen. Granger, his hat torn by bullets, rode like a lion wherever the combat was thickest. The official dispatches of Monday evening stated that two divisions of Longstreet's corps were advancing upon Rosecrans at four o'clock on that afternoon; but it turned out that this movement was merely for the purpose of a re connoissance, as no attack was made.

Gen. Rosecrans' order for his entire comman to concentrate was accomplished before midnight of that day, and it is now on a defensive position, which can be easily held until rein forcements arrive.

The movements of the troops were executed in excellent order, and although they had been worked hard for several days and nights they were in excellent spirits.
