Wednesday Evening, Sept. 30, 1868.

Death of Maj. O. W. Sees.

It is with unfeigned regret that we announce, this afternoon, the death of Maj. Oliver W. Sees, Chief of Transportation and Telegraphing, in connection with the Government of the State of Pennsylvania. He died at seven o'clock this morning, after a severe illness of many weeks, in the twenty-eighth year of his age.

It is not our purpose to write a laudatory eulogy of the deceased, nor to claim for him virtues, to embellish his memory, which he did not practice while he lived. Yet those who knew Major Sees while he lived and moved among men in the active pursuit of his profession, or the discharge of the high official duties which devolved upon him almost up to the time of his death, will admit that he possessed extraordinary powers of mind. Had his physical capacity been equal to his mental ability, he would have lived to become one of the most useful men in the country. From his early youth he was identified with the telegraphic business of the State. We may in fact write that he grew up with that vast enterprise, so that wherever over the Commonwealth a wire flashed its messages of business and politics, the victories and defeats of war, his name was as familiarly known as the sound of the clinking battery.

As Chief of Telegraphing and Transportation, Maj. Sees was charged with the most important business connected with the military operations of the Commonwealth. The movement of troops, the transportation of stores, the removal of sick and wounded, the sending home of the dead bodies of our heroes, with the transmission of confidential orders and correspondence by telegraph, were under his immediate control. How well these duties were discharged, the commendation of the Heads of the different Departments have frequently testified, while the confidence and esteem in which he was personally held by the Governor of the Commonwealth, indicate his professional worth and personal merit.

Another Prop Gone.
We are gratified to learn from Mr. Theodore Adams, who has just arrived here from Washington city, that our old townsman, Michael Burke, has firmly resolved not to support any man for Governor of Pennsylvania who Jeff. Davis would like to see elected, and hence he is constrained by his conscience and his loyalty to oppose Woodward and vote for Curtin. Mr. Burke has heretofore been one of the most effective and zealous adherents of the Democratic organization, and still claims to be as pure a Democrat as there is in the Union, but his good judgment and pure patriotism will not allow him to sustain a mere party when all the interest of his country demand his support in another direction. It is unnecessary for us to write how much we admire the independence of such men, but it is necessary for us to declare that the State of Pennsylvania looks to such men for service and support in this hour of peril to all its interests. Thus the honest and true men of the Democratic organization are abandoning their heresies and espousing the cause of the Union and the Constitution, as they are represented by Andrew G. Curtin, and repudiating the appeals of treason, as they are made in the efforts to elect George W. Woodward Governor of Pennsylvania.

THE TORY ORGAN, a little less than a week back, insisted that Col. MacDowell's Democracy was unquestionable, yet yesterday morning it abused him for having made that Democracy the motive for espousing the cause of the country. Will nothing please the Tory Organ but fealty to the interests of the slave-breeding traitors? Can friend Barrett fiddle an answer to this question from the spirits.

A Significant Fact in Proof of Copperhead Sympathy for Treason.

One of the most extraordinary positions of partisanship North and South, is that assumed by the friends of Woodward in Pennsylvania, and the friends of the Union and Constitution in Maryland, Missouri, Tennessee, and the most flourishing part of Virginia. In the States named, slavery wielded a potent influence before the rebellion was precipitated. Its social and political prestige was then irresistible. The pulpit, the press, the bar and the rostrum, were all more or less controlled by the upholders of the "peculiar institution," until the minds of the people were completely impregnated with the heresies which such a despotism taught, and until the atrocities which it practiced were regarded as the mildest and only fit form of government calculated properly to control labor. But after the rebellion was organized, the people of the States named at once took what was to them, novel grounds, and immediately announced their antagonism to slavery. They had seen the first workings of the conspiracy—they had noted the zeal with which the slaveholder entered on the war of rebellion—they had observed the ferocity with which all who opposed rebellion were assailed by the slave-breeder—and in that light, the truly loyal men of Missouri, Maryland, Tennessee, and a large portion of Virginia, resolved to make the overthrow of slavery the main compensation of the war against the slaveholders' rebellion for the overthrow of the Government. And thus resolved, the people in the States named, because they knew all about the wickedness of slavery, are now more intensely "abolitionists" in their feeling than are the people of famous Massachusetts, whom some of the copperheads desire to leave out in the cold when reconstruction becomes the business of the nation.

Now, in contrast with this position of the truly loyal men in the slave States referred to, we have the attitude of Woodward and his friends in Pennsylvania. In Pennsylvania the leaders who support Woodward are all pro-slavery men. They believe in and defend slavery as a social, moral and political institution of ineffable goodness and economy. Woodward insists that the rights of slavery are so sacred as to justify those who have money invested in the negro's flesh, to rebel against the National Government, to dissolve the National Union, and destroy the National Constitution. He insists that to think against slavery is a sin—no talk against slavery is a crime. Why do the political friends of Woodward act thus in direct opposition to the loyal men of the South? Why do the Democratic leaders in the North thus defend slavery, while the loyal men of the South regard that institution as the cause of the rebellion, and have decided that slavery must perish? To all these questions there is only one answer. Woodward and his friends are the sympathizers with slavery because slavery is the main stay and prop of the rebellion. If it were not, Woodward and his friends would not give slavery a single word of defence. There is a vast deal of good common sense in these facts, and we want thinking-men in the State of Pennsylvania to give them their full consideration.

A Nut for Copperheads to Crack.
The moment a Union man, a citizen of a slave State, can break from the grasp of the despotism now ruling in the South, he seeks some locality where he can give utterance to his love for the Government and his abhorrence for the conspirators who are fighting for his overthrow. But how does he make good his profession of love for his country and abhorrence for its rebellious foes? Does he attach himself to what is called the Democratic organization, and enter on a crusade against the administration? No! Does he stand up in Democratic councils, and demand that the traitors shall have guaranteed to them all the Constitutional rights belonging to loyal men? No! Does he howl for the extension of slavery, and insist that it is a divine institution, comprising within its organization the elements of social good and political safety? No! And yet the copperhead leaders of the free States insist that the Union men of the South are all opposed to the policy of the National Government to put down rebellion. But what do the facts prove? They prove that, as soon as a Union man of the South can relieve himself from the tyranny which has its fingers at the throats of all who oppose its progress, he ranges himself on the side of the National Administration, he announces his approval of all its acts, and makes good his sincerity by joining in any struggle to prevent what is called the Democratic party in the North from achieving political power, because he believes and declares that such a success would prove the triumph of rebellion all over the country. In proof of this we point to only three prominent men now before the people, Gov. Andy Johnson, Parson Brownlow and Col. Montgomery, editor of the Vicksburg Whig. There are thousands of other personal instances to illustrate the truth of what we assert in relation to the Union men of the South, but the three glorious patriots to whom we now allude, each occupying different positions in life, each mingling with different classes of the people of the South, and all lovers of their country, will prove that the true Union men of the South are the natural enemies of the copperhead treason sympathizing Democracy of the North. We want the copperheads to crack this nut, taste its kernel and then give us their opinion of its flavor.

Important to Soldiers Absent from Parole Camps.
We understand that an order has been issued from the War Department, to be published in the different States, giving soldiers absent from parole camps until the 15th of October to report for duty to any of the Provost Marshals of the districts to which they may be at the time specified. Those thus reporting will not be treated as deserters.

This timely order of the War Department will afford the veterans thus absent in Pennsylvania, the opportunity to vote at the coming election. All Pennsylvania soldiers at home and absent from any of the parole camps of the army, will of course take advantage of this order, to remain within the State until the time specified, for the purpose of exercising a freeman's right—a right of which Justice Woodward and Lowrie combined to deprive them.

The Effect of the Speech of a Limb of the Law.

One of the great mistakes which young professional men make, is the presumption which they entertain, that a gift of gab is a sign of genius, and that nobody is endowed with the faculty of speech but limbs of the law or pillars of the church. Of course, when such as these speak the truth, they glorify God and benefit the country. But when the truth is sought to be corrupted, when abuse is vainly made to serve the place of argument and men stultify themselves, the public are very apt to reject the effort and the man, spewing up both with a sort of nauseous disgust which the stomach feels at the introduction of foul or indigestible matter. This is being attested by a young limb of the law in this city yclept Counselor J. B. Ewing. Counselor Ewing has undertaken the defence of the rebellion, while he assumes mighty power in advocating that stinking oil of the slave pens, called "Democracy;" and he is engaged in this he deems himself most effective by the measure of abuse which he can heap on loyal men, the contumely with which he can treat the friends of freedom. Indeed, so effective has Counselor Ewing become in his trade of traduction, perversion and slander of all who do not bow down to the slave power and admit that the slave holders are right in their rebellion, that Democrats are actually becoming converted to a hearty support of what Counselor Ewing thus publicly denounces. Two Democrats called on us this morning to say that Counselor Ewing had thus effected a change in their feelings; and if the Counselor can only be persuaded to prosecute his peregrinations over the county, we expect many more at the mourner's bench of a true political repentance—a repentance which will add to the supporters of the loyal nominees in this country. But in the meantime, if the Counselor is not careful, he may have for his pains the loss of the seat of his breeches, as there are loyal men in this county who will not stand tamely by to hear their country abused by saint or sinner.

A Democratic Paper on the Suspension of the Habeas Corpus.
The Chicago Post thus rebukes the violent and seditious ravings of its copperhead contemporaries with reference to the suspension of the habeas corpus:

Some of our contemporaries, we observe, with greater zeal than judgment, are quite furious in their denunciations of the President, as the functionary who has done this thing. A respected journal in the southern end of this State accompanies the proclamation with the startling and altogether unpleasant announcement that "another nail has been driven into the coffin of the nation's liberties!" We respectfully submit that if this is so, the journal in question has been rather dilatory in making the discovery, as the act of Congress authorizing the President to do what he has done was passed some six months ago.

The War in Arkansas.
KIRBY SMITH, WITH 25,000 MEN, AT ARKADELPHIA.—EXPLOSION OF THE REBEL POWDER WORKS.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 29.
Five days later advices from Western Arkansas state that the rebels Coffee and Hunter were encamped on Coon Skin Prairie with 1,000 men. Kirby Smith was at Arkadelphia with the main body of the rebel army, said to number 25,000 men. General Cabell, and his troops and Arkansas conscripts, had joined him. The powder mill at Arkadelphia, containing upwards of 100,000 kegs of powder, exploded on the 16th. The loss is regarded by the rebels as most fatal.

Great dissatisfaction exists against Kirby Smith. Gen. Cabell is regarded as the best man in the State.
