TELEGRAPH FROM THE AMOOR RIVER TO AMERICA. a gentleman in this city—"They have granted another of those triumphs of a wise civilization me a telegraph line charter, the line to run of the advancement of which neither Russia not the mouth of Amoor river to America—the United States have been the least contrib It will unite all the continents and be the great work of the age. It will illustrate my mission to this country."

To those who are unacquainted with the progress of the negotiations which have resulted in securing the consent of the Russian Government to the line referred to, it would seem, from the above, that the project originated with constructing the proposed line at its own cost Mr. Clay and that the grant which willing the Government of the United States will be Mr. Olay, and that the grant which "illus trates" his mission was made directly to himself. So far is this from the truth that the original application to the Russian Government was not only made long before Mr. Clay's first visit to Russia, but was pushed through its necessary stages of reference, and had been laid before the committee of Ministers for final decision, previous to his return to St. Petersburg rial Government, and ordered to be serious in May last. A short history of the origin and progress of this enterprise—one of the most earnestly supported by the American legation important of this age—is due to the public.

U. S. Commercial Agent for the Amoor river, of, and presenting the views embodied in, th who laid his proposal for the construction of a above note, personally advocated the enterpris telegraph line from the Amoor via Behring's by repeated interviews with the Director Stratts to Oregon before the Russian Govern- Ways of Communication, the Chief of th ment, as early as 1859. At that time, however, Asiatic Department and the Governor Genera he received only a permission to make a survey of Siberia. In the beginning of April, of thi of the proposed route. He thereupon returned to the United States and succeeded in interest intermediate stages, it was finally laid befor ing some of the prominent American telegraphine in Imperial Council of Ministers for their ists in his scheme. The present administration gave him the most prompt and cordial support, and he was re-appointed to the position he held under Buchanan for the sole purpose of affording him facilities to prosecute his enterprise.

When Gen. Cameron was received by the Emperor Alexander II, soon after his arrival in St. Petersburg, in June, 1862, he took occasion to renew the discussion of the subject, and his reference to it was most cordially received by the Emperor. Mr. Collins reached St. Petersburg early in September, and thereupon Gen. Cameron sent the following note to Prince Gertschacow, Minister of Foreign Affairs:

LEGATION OF THE UNITED STATES,

St. Petersburg, Sept. 5, 1862. The undersigned, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States of America, begs leave to recall to the memory of His Excellency, Prince Gortchacow, Vice Chancellor of the Empire, the conversation which he had with His Excellency at Peterhoff, on the 4th of July, relative to the construction of a line of telegraph between Russians of Mr. Collins, the former and present Commercial Agent of the United States for the Amoor river, enables the undersigned to communicate the proposal, in a definite form, to the Government of His Imperial Majesty.

made in telegraphic enterprise, in both countries, has not only greatly shortened the link time? plan to limits which render it practicable and certain. The Russian line, which then terminated at Kazan, is now extended to Omsk, in Western Siberia, and in the course of another year will probably reach Irkutek; while the American lines, then extending only to St. Louis, on the Mississippi river, now strike the Pacific Ocean at San Francisco, and in a short time will be continued to the Northern frontier of the United States, in Oregon—thus leaving a gap of less than five thousand miles, to comte the telegraphic union of two the conti-

The present plan of Mr. Collins, therefore, in the construction of a line from the mouth of the Amoor, by the way of Okhotsk and Kamschatka to Behring's Straits, across that narrow channel to the American continent, and thence by land through the Russian Possessions and the small portion of British America which in tervenes, to the territory of the United States. This plan has been embodied in a bill, which has passed to a second reading in the Senate of the United States, and will undoubtedly receive the sanction of the Government, appropriating one hundred thousand dollars for the purpose of accertaining, by survey, the most practicable and economical route between the two points. The dispatches which the undersigned has received from the Department of State, justify him in assuming that his Government is ready to assist the undertaking with a liberal subsidy requires us to choose. Rather than permit this guaranteed to the submarine jelegraph across the Atlantic Ocean. Nothing now remains but that the Government of His Imperial Majesty grant the right of way, without which privilege the enterprise cannot, be carried into operation. His Excelency, Gen. Chefkin, Chief Director of the Ways of Communication, has, it is true, given to Mr. Collins permission ready been shed in this unhallowed war in its to distribute the context of the proposed line, but the behalf."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16. Last night about eight o'clock, according to passengers from the army, informs ion came to Gen. Meade that a corps of the rebel army, supposed to be Gen. A. P. Hill's, had moved from our front in the direction of Leesburg.
