HARRISBURG, PA.

Friday Evening, October 23, 1863.

The Way We Spoil Our Generals. Indulgence spoils children, and flattery has ruined many a good man. When the war to crush rebellion began to present the immense proportions which it has since assumed, the American people seemed to lose eight of the great object of the struggle, in their anxiety to possess a hero. Every newspaper had its beau a plea could be created in objection. The order ideal of a soldier. Every parish claimed to have of the Knights of the Golden Circle selected the election given birth to the man for the times, and each Commonwealth that was loyal, claimed that it either recruited and sent into the field in support of the National cause, more men and better men than its sister States. This made hero worship a species of insanity with the people. Men were scarcely appointed to command, before their brows were encircled with wreaths which they never earned. Merchants' clerks, strutting for the first time in a lieutenant's uniform, became swollen with importance before the dust of a battle field had soiled the lustre of their brass buttons. Politicians who never beheld the gleam of a weapon as it was wielded in fight, suddenly became self-endowed with the mighty faculty of command. Such as these sprung, not from the brain of Jove, panoplied and equipped for battle, but from every local interest, from every dirty little clique, or from the preference of every designing politician who had power to elevate a favorite. These were puffed and inflated, advertised and elevated, until men rose from lieutenancy to become generals, faster than intelligent, patient citizens, who had taken their places voluntarily in the ranks, could acquire a knowledge of the discipline or the secret of obedience to a command. Officers who had never handled more than a hundred soldiers, whose knowledge of the art of war did not extend beyond an acquintance with the manual of arms, were placed in positions which the oldest soldiers in the world only reached after patient study, indomitable struggles and bloody fighting. The friends of men thus elevated became perfectly insane on the subject of the merits of their favorites. Armies melted away before the gaze of the country without having achieved a single practical result thousand votes! The calm judgment and for the cause of the Nation. Yet the Government, which was always held responsible for the most minute detail of our military Pennsylvania from being prostrated to eat ditt operations, was censured for even attempting at the feet of the slaveholding conspirators. to interfere with individual officers in command. When an officer was or is removed. however palpable his crimes and notorious his inability, his friends at once raise the cry that he fell a victim to the jealousy of those above him in command, or he was sacrificed to appease the malica of some member of the Administration. The folly of such charges renders them too ridiculous for refutation. The Administration has been forced to place men in power by Government supported Curtin and hence Wood'It has been secertained that none of the the hue and cry of politicians of all parties, but ward was defeated. So far, the copperheads are the hue and cry of politicians of all parties, but ward was defeated. So far, the copperheads are rebel infantry were engaged with Gea. Kilpat we question seriously whether any man in a right, and we are perfectly willing that they rick's cavalry, near Buckland Mills, on Monany other grounds but those of incompetency, the friends of the Government, the friends of

It has embarrassed the Adminis-tration most seriously, and more than once out the Government in a peril always satisfac-tory to its armed rebel enemies. Good men should discountenance such fault-finding.— Loyal men should confront and denounce those who indulge in the practice. Unless this is done we will be constantly in confusion, and the result must be embarrassing if not ultimate

Dr. Cunwan, the efficient and able head of sailed and as wilfully misrepresented a few days copperhead leaders, to support the Governsince by the Tory Crgan. The allegation of the Crean sought to create the impression that Dr. Curwen had interfered with the franchises of the An Emancipation Convention from the employees in the Asylum, and that he had threatened to discharge any one under his control who did not vote for Gov. Curtin and the entire Union ticket. We have been assured by names, Dr. Curwen gav. Democrats and Republicans, and that he even went so far as to get power in the Government.

It derives supplied three and four thousand dollars of rebel money; also, a large number of drafts prepared for thousand supplied number of drafts prepared for pre one man assessed, without knowing for whom he would vote. -We make this statement to satisfy the employees of the Asylum, who feel indignant that they should have been placed in so mean a position before the public. But Dr. Curwen needs no defence, either in this community or whereever he is known personally and professionally His high integrity, proud honor and generous institution of slavery in the slave States, and disposition would spurn to be guilty of an act while denouncing "Abolitionism" in unmeasured. Every election poll in Berks county was in the hands of the copperheads. With this advantage the votes of loyal men, the votes of soldiers, and the vote Mississippi: of every man not known to be favorable to the election of Woodward, were rejected, whenever officers for Berks county, AND SWORE THEM TO LEAVE NO EFFORT UNTRIED TO PROMOTE THE OBJECTS OF THE CIRCLE! The vote in Berks county shows, conclusively, that the officers thus selected and sworn, were faithful to that oath, while they perjured themselves on oaths to conduct the election fairly. In what is called the Tenth Legion-in Lehigh, Northampton, Wayne, Carbon, Monroe and Pike, the vote of the copperheads was immense. To what they gained from the fact that so many loyal men were absent from their localities in the army, in proportion to those belonging to the copperhead organization, they added greatly by the colonization of voters from the State of New York. In those counties the dough-faced Democracy adopted the same game which the border ruffians played that upon the home vete the copperheads will in Kansas. They imported voters! New York have eight, no more, out of the ninety coun furnished any number of voters to swell the majorities in the Tenth Legion. At the same time, also, the land owners and landlords in the localities referred to, (the majority of whom are copperheads) used all sorts of threats to intimidate their tenants into voting for Woodward. When threats failed, money and oaths were brought into requisition, so that we are justified in attributing the large vote which Woodward received in the Tenth Legion, to the worst and most desperate frauds ever pe petrated by any set of unhung scoundrels in the

-Had it not been for the frauds thus perpe trated all over the Commonwealth, wherever the copperheads had the control of the elections had it not been for the mean conduct of copperhead assessors, the majority of Andrew G. Curtin, instead of being a little less than sixteen, would have been largely over fifty the stern patriotism, with the splendid contest The Rebel Retreat a Necessity for Lack which Curtin made personally, alone saved
