

They Died Hard.

Some animals die hard. Cut up a snake as much as you please, and the story is, that the parts will wriggle until sundown. Copperheads particularly, won't give up as long as they can help it.

We can understand how they hoped to make something by lying before the election, but cannot understand the policy of keeping up the game afterwards. And we rather imagine that those who lost their money on faith in the assurances that Woodward was elected, can't see the wisdom of the thing any more than we can.

Some of the copperheads in Pottsville lost heavy bets on the strength of news received from this city. Extras were issued in that borough from the copperhead newspaper office, announcing the election of Woodward certain.

Judge Woodward's Resignation.

The sagacity of the Democratic State Convention of Pennsylvania, says the North American, in providing, by resolution, that Judge Woodward should not resign his seat on the Supreme Bench pending his candidacy for the gubernatorial chair, has been rendered manifest in the result of the election.

This is administering justice in a very novel and ingenious sort of way. It is pretty much as though one of the parties in some of the important suits pending in the Supreme Court should, after the decision being given against him, push Judge Woodward from his seat and proceed to sit in judgment upon him.

The New Call for Troops.

Some of the copperhead organs point to the prompt manner in which Governor Seymour, of New York, issued a proclamation urging the people of that State to respond to the President's call for troops, and urge other States to follow suit, at the same time casting reflections upon the Republican Governors for not having done so already.

Seymour's reasons for his course are purely political. Volunteering suits him exactly, because under that system the army is filled up from the ranks of the Republicans and War Democrats, the copperheads all staying at home to do the election business.

Politics—The Subject of Supporting the Government.

The bitterness with which the tory-treason sympathizers in Pennsylvania contested the reelection of Andrew G. Curtin, establishes the malignity of their determination to assist in the formation of an independent government, distinct and separate from the old Government of Union, out of the slave States.

Struggle, on the one side, to maintain Pennsylvania in her true and legitimate attitude of allegiance to the Federal Government; and on the other, to wrest the Commonwealth from the bonds and the obligations of the Union, and cast it with all its vast and impregnable strength of material resources and population, into the dirty pool of treason.

We have given a brief extract from the article: "These things they did not as Catholics or Irishmen, but as adherents of the Democratic party, as partisans of Horatio Seymour, Fernando Wood, James Brooks, Clement L. Vallandigham, and others who, by their incendiary speeches, and by leading articles in the Democratic journals, had for months been exciting their passions against the Government, against the conscription, against the war, and had worked them up to uncontrollable fury."

As we wrote in the foregoing paragraph, the enemies of the government are a vigilant and an industrious gang of rascals. The cause in which these demagogues are engaged absorbs them from everything like a moral or a merely political obligation.

Every day should be made glorious by the creation of some good influence of strength for those struggling in support of the nation's cause. No present business should be so important as to absorb any man from his duty to his government. No locality should be deemed too sacred for the defence of the Union.

Dr. Brownson on the New York Riots.

In the October number of Brownson's Review, we find among the articles one on "Catholics and the Anti-Draft Riots." An article on this subject from such a source is eminently worthy of perusal.

Dr. Brownson undoubtedly wields an abler pen than any other Catholic writer in this country, and his productions always find readers among thinkers, whether they agree with him or not. He seems to write what he thinks, no matter whether or not it suits the church authorities.

He admits that the rioters almost exclusively were Irishmen and Catholics, but charges the responsibility mainly on the Democratic party for arousing them to do as they did.

Dr. Brownson's article is a most decided stand in favor of the Union, from the time that the rebellion broke out. In his article on the July riots he endeavors to clear the Catholic Church as such from the responsibility.

The Department of the Ohio, Major General Burris. The Department of the Cumberland, Major General Thomas. The Department of the Tennessee, Major General Hurlbut.

Gen. Sherman and Hooker will command grand divisions in the field, for the present. The Department of the Gulf commences at the mouth of the Red river. That of the Missouri, under General Schofield, is not included in the division of General Grant.

General Rosecrans said in his speech at the Merchants Exchange yesterday, that it was his firm belief that if the forces recently sent to Chattanooga had been ordered there before, as ought to have been done, the back bone of rebellion would have been broken.
