If he appears ridiculous by being forced to back out, he has no claim or compassion, for he had no right, no more right than he has to rob and murder, to enter into this contest of retalla-

This was the way the copperheads in the second war with Great Britain supported their Government. The President, in their estimation, never did anything that was right in the conduct of the war, but was always setting up some "monstrous pretensions," just as Mr. of the rebels now in arms against our Beloved Lincoln has been doing in the conduct of the present war against treason! President Madison, however, triumphed then over these cop perheads as well as over the enemy. in arms; and the anti-war party of that day discovered, when too late, that they had dug their own political graves. The historic simile is instructive. President Lincoln will triumph in this war against treason, as President Madison tri umphed in the war against Great Britain, not withstanding the "monstrous pretersions which the copporheads are continually charging against him; and then the party which now opposes the government, as represented in his their political graves still deeper than those of the cowboys and tories of the Bevolution, or the copperheads of 1812–15.
