HARRISBURG, PA.

FRIDAY EVENING, JANUARY 29, 1864.

A Home for the Soldiers' Orphans. Governor Curtin, in his message to the Legislature, which body the copperheads in the Senate will not permit to proceed to business refers to an offer of money which the Pennsylvania Railroad Company had made to the State, but which he (the Governor) could not accept for want of power. After this reference, his Excellency suggests that power be granted him to accept the money thus tendered, as it is presumed that the company still considers its tender binding; and that when the State is put in possession of this sum, that other moneys be appropriated, the whole to be applied to the creation and support of a school or an asylum for the orphans of the heroes who perished in the war to crush rebellion. The whole subject is one of a greater importance than most people will at first sight be led to admit, while the expense of the enterprise, however large it may appear as thus presented, will never reach a sum to make the institution a burden to the State Indeed, such an institution would not require an existence at most of more than fifteen years, supposing that the war will not last many months longer. The orphans of the men who have already fallen in battle while contend ing for the Government, would all be in a condition in fifteen years hence, to care for themselves, or at least to be placed where they could earn their own diving. Hence, there can be no argument ordered against this enterprise, on the source of cost. Considering the obligations under which the State rests to those who went forth to maintain its honor and secure its existence, there should be no hesitancy, when the proper time arrives, promptly to have le for the creation, and the support of his ansitution.

It is not out of place, in advance of any legislative action on this subject, to discuss locality best suited for the erection of such institution As in institution purely iden it y reputation and liberal with the of the people of the Commonwealth, its tion should be to has at once to make it lound to the har credit of Pennsylvanias view of the subject, then we are con all disinterested men will agree an asylum such as it is proernor Curtin to erect, should be e it would be constantly under ince, and, if necessary, supervision of the State authorities, Executive and Legislative. Hence, we insist that the capital of the State is the proper locality for the asylum proposed to be established. The facilities afforded for access to the capital—the advantages of the country by which we are surrounded—the health of the region of Harrisburg -with other advantages which it is unnecessary at present to enumerate, all combining to make it almost absolutely necessary that this establishment be located in our midst;

-However premature it may now seem thus to discuss this matter, we deem it due to the State and its capital that thus early the attention of the people of Pennsylvania should be called to the project. We have every reason to believe that an attempt will be made, if no egitation of the subject is had, to combine the purposes of this enterprise with others of a similar character, which are controlled by individuals entirely, and which reflect their credit alone upon a locality. What is aimed at by the establishment of the institution proposed by Governor Curtin, is to found one that will be recognized as the work of the We will return to this subject when it comes properly before the Legislature.

"Crockadile Tears for the Soldiers." The buffoon of the House, and the most disgustingly blatant of all the demagogues that ever disgraced the Legislature, Rex of Montgomery county, attempted yesterday to create a sensation in that body, by offering a resolution condemnatory of the State and national authorities for the manner in which the returning veterans are received and accommodated at this post. We have no apology to offer for the gross neglect of duty which lies at the door of some of the subordinates at this post, nor will we attempt to deny that the reception of our returning heroes has been shabby in the extreme. But then, the idea of Rex attempting to make capital for his party out of the neglects of individual officers is supremely ridionlous and impertinently preposterous. The idea of such a miserable, foul mouthed villifier of patriots, heroes and a good Government, seeking to pass a resolution of censure for wrongs to the soldiers which he and his party have exceeded a thousand fold. Bah! While Rex was laboring to accomplish his dirty object, not actually to vindicate the soldiers from wrong, but, if possible, really to bring disgrace to the Government, Mr. Bigham, of Allegheny, administered a most withering rebuke to the tribe of which Rex is a contemptible adherent. Mr. Bigham fully exposed the hypocrisy of the whole movement, and the House contributed to the rebuke of Rex by refusing to entertain his motion. A substitute was of fered in lieu of Rex's resolution of censure, which will bring this whole subject before the public. Whenever the soldiers must depend upon such a thing as Rex for defence or justice. they will cease to be heroes, and will have sunk as utterly low, as is Rex, in the public estimation and respect.

In all candor and sincerity, and with no desire to assail any man in authority, but with no fear, either, of offending the guilty, we would ask, whose duty is it to see to the comfort, the subsistence and the shelter of the returning veterans? We cannot close our eyes to the fact, that there are Major Generals, Staff officers, Captains, Lieutenants and every grade of officials at this post to attend to "military affairs." And yet, when a regiment of veterans arrive at Harrisburg, either during | war will be averted in India and Japan, day-light or dark-in sunshine or railer it is nobody's business to give them quarters—no-body's business to issue them rations—nobody's business to pay them off. This men are left to lie down in the mud—they are forced to repose on the steps of the caritol or a cellar door. In one instance, while these veterans were huddled together in the soldier's retreat, they were driven out on the written order of a Major General, at the point of the Provost Marshal's bayonets. These are facts. We cannot close our eyes to them; and it is time that the Government take hold of these neglects, if we expect men to peril their lives in its defence. Somebody is to blame, and we demand that that somebody be exposed. If it is not the business of the innumerable officers at this post to attend to the wants of the soldiers to see that they are quartered, subsisted, paid, &c., then the officers in question area set of idlers, consuming the substance of the people without a fair return in service, and they should all be expelled from the employment of the Government forthwith.

We trust that the committee appointed to inquire into these neglects and abuses will sift the whole business thoroughly. But the attempt at exposure by such men as Rex only adds to the insult and injury of the soldier. Yet, in the meantime, we trust that a know ledge of these proceedings will reach the proper department of the Government and that the officers guilty of these damnable wrongs will be held to a strict accountability.

What, is Wrong, at Headquarters!
A few months since we called a finite on to the fact, that the delay in setting minuary claims in the Departments at Washington, was inflicting misery and almost starvition upon thousands of widows and orphans. Since we thus called attention to this fact, many of our cotemporaries have engaged in discussing the same subject, until the fact has been developed that there are thousands of families throughout the country, whose husbands and fathers have been killed in this war, or have perished from disease, and who They find it utterly impossible to get any attention to their claims from the authorities at Washington. We know instances of precisely this kind. Widows whose lambarate transfer of the same evening he crossed the Holstein river with a yiew of intercepting the enemy of the same direction where the same direction in the same direction. are suffering for want of the back pay which this kind. Widows, whose husbands have fallen on the field of battle, and who have nothing whatever, for themselves and their children to live upon, would be mide comfortable if they could only get the pay which was due to their husbands when they fell. Yet all their applications have been utterly fruitless. They cannot even get answers to the inquiries which are made on their behalf. Surely this ought to be promptly remedied, and we trust our representatives in Congress will see to it at once. The people tolerate the procrastination which ordinarily retards the transaction of all official business, with a patience which they would not display to any set of men charged with the conduct of private affairs. But it is hardly possible that the same patience will attend the delay in settlement of the claims of widows and orphans, or disabled men, made such by the war. The people demand that these claims be at once adjusted and liquidated.

the effort to crush the slave-holders' rebellion, is one whom the enemies of the government and the friends of slavery are plotting to invest with civil power. There is not a hero in the army-not a brave, true-hearted man, who before the rebellion was a Democrat and who is now laboring for the cause of the Union, that is half so adulated as the man whom the Democracy are gilding preparatory to his being set up as a candidate for popular favor. When in command, this man was more prompt to obey the behests of his partizan associates than follow the orders of his superiors in authority. Since his relief from duty, his name is the theme of praise in rebeldom, and his fame is the sheen of glory to a party whose avowed purpose is to frustrate the efforts of the government to crush rebellion with the force of arms, simply be cause the object is to save the prestige of slavery by compromising with treason, in order that the influences of that institution may be unimpaired for the uses of Democracy. This is the political General of the war. His name alone conduced to the creation of partizanships in the army. His followers in politics deny the rights of citizenship to those who gave him all the notoriety he possesses, (save that of his notorious sympathy with the political enemies of the government) andy yet we are constantly reminded that the "abolitionists have made this a political war." EMIGRATION FROM IRELAND. The emigra tion statistics of the port of Liverpool show the total exodus of the past year to have been 137,982 to all points-and increases of 76,668 upon the year 1862. The emigration from Ireland to the United States is still increasing in volume. It is stated that there are not emigrant ships enough to bring the people over who are waiting for a passage to this country. The boarding houses in Liverpool are reported full of emigrants ready to embark for the United States.

SOME SO-CALLED LADIES OF VICKERURG took pains to exhibit their disgust at hearing the prayer of the President read in the Episcopal Church in that city by a loyal clergyman, on Christmas day, by leaving the church. The commanding general recognized their unladylike conduct as an insult to the Government which he represents, and at once issued an order banishing from the Federal lines all who were parties in the performance.
