I do not say that this newspaper office ought to have been mobbed. I know not the ground upon which it was done, nor anything about it except the fact that it was done, but I do say that it is impossible for a free people, for a local community, to stand by and see and hear the enunciations which are made from mouths and from papers, and not feel as if those things ought to be suppressed, and that it is dangerous to the welfare of the country that they should not be suppressed. It is only a wonder to me that this kind of mobbing which is spoken of has prevailed to so small a degree as it has.

I want now, sir, to ask another question or two. Have you ever heard of any paper being suppressed for praising the soldiers of the country, or for urging the suppression of the rebellion? Have you ever heard of any paper being suppressed for calling upon the young men and the middle aged men to enlist in the defense of their country? Have you ever heard of any paper being suppressed for any man being imprisoned for denouncing Jeff Davis? Have you ever heard of any man being imprisoned, or papers suppressed for approving the hanging of traitors for tearing down the flag of their country? Or have you ever heard of any paper being suppressed—and I will ask this of the Senator from Philadelphia—for refusing to negotiate with Jeff Davis? You never have, and you never will in this country. The idea of negotiating with Jeff Davis! The idea of making peace by going down on our knees and saying to Jeff Davis, "What terms do you want us to submit to?" The idea of recognizing that man as at the head of any organized government which ought to be recognized by honest men, loyal men, civilized men, or any class of men but barbarians! And then we are met here to night—and I confess that I was astonished—by the remark that we are disloyal because we sustain a President who refuses to stop—that "An inhuman man war!" And the implication of that remark is, I understand it, that this war should never have been commenced; the implication of that remark is, if I understand it, (it was said in connection with remarks upon the language, that this war might have been stopped if we had negotiated with those traitors in the beginning, and that we were wrong in rushing to arms for the suppression of this rebellion.)

I have heard of no paper being torn out in 1862-63 which sustained General Jackson in suppressing John C. Calhoun; and there would have been none torn out at this day if General Jackson had had his way as it had been permitted to hang John C. Calhoun that day, and I am willing that I would have had John C. Calhoun should be hung; and I want now that the blood, which has sprung from him North and South, be hung.

Then this glorious old Democratic party existed in its men and in its principles. Its principles being that the country was above everything else, and its men refusing to calculate the value of the Union. Now they calculate the value of this great Union by a penny stamp upon the plaster placed upon a sick man's back. That is the way that the gentleman from Northumberland meets this great question. I will say, in conclusion, that this old Democratic party and this old Democratic principle—found in whatever party they may—will sustain the country, and in times past when we called ourselves Democrats and Whigs or Democrats and Republicans, and when we called ourselves Democrats and Whigs or Democrats and Whigs, there was nothing between us that went down—to the root of Democracy and found us there differing. It needed this rebellion to bring out that all Democracy was the same thing wherever it might be; and that all the principles of loyalty and patriotism sprang from the Democracy of which I speak as the commencement of my remarks.

The Democracy which will put the country above everything else is the Democracy that I love. I care not whether the man calls himself a Democrat or a Republican, if he places his party above his country—if he desires to grind out of the groans and tears of the people that which will make him rich—he is disloyal, according to the test which I think ought to be applied to the test which I am writing to be applied to myself.

This is the time to defend Abraham Lincoln; but I must be permitted to say here, that having done all that I could as an honorable partisan to prevent his obtaining the position which he now occupies, feeling that I was sustaining principles which I had always sustained by voting for and endeavoring to secure the election of another man, I cannot now say—nor that I esteem Abraham Lincoln a man—not that he has done everything that I would have desired—but that, looking at Abraham Lincoln disinterestedly as the head of the nation, I think he has pursued the course which he has followed with an eye single to the best interests of the country. I do not say that better means than those which he has used might not have been adopted; but I do say—and I firmly and solemnly believe—and am willing to meet the expression of opinion at a higher bar than the tribunal before which I am now speaking—I do say, that I believe that to the best of his ability and with the desire to save bloodshed—with the desire to bring back those who had grievously wronged their country, with the desire to secure peace to the country, when war had already intervened, and following up his desire to prevent war, his single object has been the welfare of the country. I believe him to be a true patriot; and I believe that if his power was equal to his wish, and if his wisdom was equal to his wish, (and I do not say that it is not,) that everything would be done in this country which the heart of its best citizens could desire. [Applause.] I believe that in any of the services of the country, of which the gentleman from Philadelphia has spoken and into which desolation has been poured—you will not find from any mother or any father, if any of these houses, a denunciation of Abraham Lincoln. If you will meet that mother in the quiet of the night, when she can do nothing but meditate upon her brave boy, whose loveless is made the brighter to her vision by the dark clouds that have come over in his death, and the man who denounces Abraham Lincoln for having led out the armies into which that boy went, she will say, "My boy went for the service of his country, and I love my country more."
