A DEMAGOGUE'S BID FOR OFFICE.

Henry D. Foster's Self Abnegations.

Three weeks or more since, Henry D. Foster made a great flourish in challenging Andrew G. Curtin to meet him before the people of Pennsylvania...

Mr. Foster plants himself on the Reading platform. By this he endorses the principle of Douglas, and in spirit reiterates the sentiments of carelessness as to whether slavery is voted up or down.

On the question of the Tariff, Henry D. Foster is about as safe and reliable as James K. Polk was claimed to be on the same subject. It is of course a game of brag, which he knows he will never be called on to verify in any position to which he may hereafter be called.

There is literally nothing but sophistry and flattery in his entire speech. Blended with the Irish blarney of Billy Stokes, it has a twang of that deceitful coolness with which Foster disposes of a responsibility when he is embarrassed.

THE PROSPECT IN THE NORTH-WEST.

Our information from the north-west is of the most reliable character. The prospect is that the Republican candidate for Governor will carry the northern and north-western counties by an increased vote over that given to Fremont in 1856.

In 1856, the people of the northern counties of Pennsylvania rallied their strength on John C. Fremont, believing that he was pledged to the cause of protection. This was the great issue in that region.

Table listing counties and their populations: Allegheny 18,871; Armstrong 2,963; Bradford 6,930; Butler 3,401; Columbia 1,989; Crawford 6,980; Erie 6,166; Lawrence 8,065; Mercer 8,888; Potter 1,264; Susquehanna 3,861; Somerset 1,458; Tioga 4,541; Venango 2,041; Warren 2,091; Washington 4,287; Wayne 2,172; Westmoreland 4,091.

These counties gave Fremont a total vote of 91,251—while the majorities in all of them combined amounted to 33,233.

ion will augment the majorities of the Republican candidates far beyond any calculations that the most sanguine friends of Lincoln and Hamlin have yet made.

Our friends in the centre and the eastern part of Pennsylvania must emulate the vigor and vigilance of the Republicans of the North and North-west.

THE SENTINEL, sleepless in a bad cause and generally correct in matters of taste, deems us either verdant or credulous to allow anything that Henry D. Foster may say on the subject of the Tariff, or indeed on any other political question.

PARTICULARS OF WALKER'S CAPTURE. It appears, from intelligence brought by the Empire City, that Walker and his men were captured on the 2d inst.

The strangest feature in this attempt to bolster up Henry D. Foster, is the fact that such men as those who control the columns of the Sentinel, should be deceived and cajoled into his support.

Hon. Galusha A. Grow spoke from the same stand. His speech was a perfect annihilator. Full of facts and figures, fraught with original arguments, and at the same time very eloquent.

Joseph Casey, Esq., followed in a logical and lucid exposition of the principles of Republicanism, which was very enthusiastically received by his hearers.

FROM LANCASTER. Grand Republican Demonstration. THE OLD GUARD IN MOTION. Forty Thousand Republicans Assembled.

LANCASTER, September 19, 1860. The meeting of the Republicans, in this city, to-day, was a monster, notwithstanding the weather was unpropitious.

During the morning, the city was a continual scene of excitement and enthusiasm, while the display of the arriving delegations made up a spectacle of gorgeous splendor such as added very much to the importance of the occasion.

The great feature of the day, aside from the speaking, was the procession. It was formed under the direction of Col. David S. Patterson, and just as it got under way, a rapid storm of rain discharged itself on the multitude.

At the point at which we beheld the procession passing we could not possibly note all that was presented to our view, and the fact of the rain pouring down just at that hour, rendered it necessary for delegation after delegation to pass as quickly as possible.

The crowd on the ground where the meeting was organized was immense before the procession arrived. When the head of the cavalcade reached the main stand a scene of confusion was only prevented by the prompt action of those having the meeting in charge.

I cannot close this hasty and most imperfect description of the great Lancaster mass meeting, without alluding to the Wide-Awake Club of Harrisburg, under command of Capt. Eyster, and those of Middletown, under command of Capt. Embig.

A. H. Reeder spoke from a third stand. The ex-Governor confined himself to the question of freedom as it was involved in the history of the Kansas difficulties, and enlightened the crowd in regard to the mercenary motives which prompted the administration of both Pierce and Buchanan to oppose the wishes of a majority of the people of that territory in the organization of its State government.

No more brilliant effect could possibly be imagined than that produced by ten or fifteen thousand men, having torches in their hands going through the most difficult manoeuvres, and marching with a steadiness and precision only equalled by those accustomed to martial training and discipline.

A large crowd of Germans assembled in Fulton Hall in the evening to listen to the eloquent German defender of Republicanism, Carl Schurz. I was not present, but learned that his reception was very brilliant, and that his speech elicited the most enthusiastic applause.

From nine o'clock the depot was crowded with anxious delegations, waiting for the different trains to convey them to their homes.
