the Mountain fixes that all diseases arise from interesting account of his adventures there, you will find in our Almanac and Pamphlet.

It is an established fact that all diseases arise from IMPURE BLOOD!

The blood is the life I and when any foreign or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is once distributed to every organ of the body. Every nerve feels the poison, and all the vital organs quickly complain. The stomach will not digest the food perfectly. The liver ceases to secrete a sufficiency of bile. The action of the heart is weakened, and so the circulation is feeble. The liver ceases to come clogged with the poisonous matter; hence a cough—and all from a elight impurity of the fountain-liced of life—the Blood! As it you had thrown some earth, for instance, in a pure spring, from which ran a tiny rivolet in a few minutes the whole course of the stream be, comes disturbed and discolored. As quickly does impure blood iy to every part, and leave its sting behind. All the pessages become obstructed, and unless the obstruction is removed; the lamp of life soon dies cut.

These pills not only purify the blood, but regenerate all the secretions of the body, they are, therefore, unrivalied as

OLD SAM BUGGLES.

It is an old but trite saying, that truth is stranger than fiction; and character, whether figuring in history or in the plot of a novel, to be effective and capable of exciting the admiration, and callisting the sympathies of the reader, must in one case be the embodiment of true heroism, and in the other the faithful and true heroism, and in the other the faithful and exact type of it. The poem and romance, though the offspring of fruitful imaginations, and of pens skilled in the artistic delineation of the various phases of humanity, and of whatever is imposing and curious in nature and art, do not owe their superiority to mere drapery of words; but to the genuineness of the characters they portray and the purity of the morals that they teach. If the bent of my preface is not understood, I hereby renounce every thing in the way of metaphor by pledging my veracity that old Sam Russian, and his attendants in the group, are true and faithful copies of flesh and blood originality. Sam was a sort of on offcast of one of the first families, and was banished to a tract of first families, and was banished to a tract of land in the "Octorara barrens," to fulfill the mission of a farmer; but his calling was sadly mistaken, from the fact of the diversity of his ATTORNEY AT LAW.

OFFERS his professional services to all persons having business to be transacted in the several Courts of Dauphin county, the Land Department of this State, or before the Board of Property. Having been associated in the practice of the Law, with his faither, JOHN A. RISHER, he promises diligent and careful attention to all professional business entrusted to them Office corner of Second and Locust streets, (opposite to the Rannaylyania House,) Harrisburg.

W. W. LIANC. these elegant pursuits he added, in his younger days, an enthusiastic devotion to field sports, and it was refreshing to see a knot of green ones drink in the account of his exploits, one of which he used to relate with unusual gravity, in proof of his having been an athlete, was carrying a favorite hound a distance of several miles home on his back. The dog's powers of endurance were of course inferior to those of his master, who, at the end of the chase, found his four legged friend so much exhausted, that he reversed the course of things, by bearing, like another Hercules, the huge dog home on his shoulders.

Sam's personnel was such that stamped him with the indubitable characteristic of an original. In stature he was neither tall nor short; but was what you might denominate one of the but was what you might denominate one of the betweens. On state occasions he wore a white cloth surfout, that extended to his ankles, and mounted a hat of the same color, and of stove the propersions, which stuck on the back of his head, as he moved along with a quick step, brought to mind—if not the classic gait of Lord Margin by at least something, differing but Macanlay—at least something differing but alightly from the waving plume of the renowned Marshal Murat. His physiognomy was a study, but my space will not permit me to enter, into any further analysis of it, than to say his brows were Websterian, and his lips of classic mould, when unsoiled with tobacco BUEHLER HOUSE, Sam was fortunate in securing his juice. Sam was fortunate in securing his counterpart in many respects in his better half; and I often sighed at my lack of ability to wield the brush with the master hand of him whose name I have assumed; and if I possessed but a tithe of the talent of that great carrica turist, I might convey to canvass two full length portraits, that would not only achieve The above well known and long established Hetel is my own immortality, but would form a picture mow undergoing a thorough renovation, and being in a great degree newly furnished, under the proprietorship of Mr. George newly furnished, under the proprietorship possibility fail to secure a place in the gallery

> There was also a vein of heroi m in Sam's composition, and though the science of war was omitted in my enumeration of his accomplishments, he was nevertheless entitled to claim, as he modestly did, considerable reputa-tion in arms. He was at the battle of the Monumental City, and often related in the hearing of his biographer with thrilling effect, how he had witnessed the discharge of the field piece, by a veteran son of Mars, that despaiched the idedtical shot which killed the famous Gen. Ross; how the red coats fluttered around the wounded leader of the covey, and how the American commander Gen. Brown whilst galloping along the lines, had criticised in thundering tones, his (Sam's) masterly stroke in tactics of placing a rail on the breast works to form a rest for his musket and those of his comrades. Paradoxical as it may appear for an adept on the wing, as Sam was, to bring down his game in battle by aiming from a rail, it is not of the stroke of the same and the sa it is, notwithstanding, strictly and scrupulously biographical.

moral and adorn a tale" in illustration of Sam's multifarious attainments; but as such an amplification might impart a prominence to his character that his descendents would not relcharacter that his descendents would not relish; I will in conclusion merely allude to one of the many grotesque combinations, he was in the habit of presenting. He was very fond of excitement, even in his old days; and it mattered not whether the stirring occasions was a militia training, a political meeting, or a religi-ous revival, it was equally attractive to him. ons revival, it was equally attractive to hin.—
He was participating one evening in a very animated and crowded "quarterly meeting," and was nowing to and fro in the aisle with rapid steps, exclaiming in his highest key, "lost irrevocably lost," and in the same breath addressed his quizzieal neighbor Warner with a demand for a "chew of toberon" which is demand for a "chew of tobacco," which is among the most striking exemplifications on record of there being but 'one step between the sublime and ridiculous.' If Sam Ruggles was not a true type of a "jack of all trades," he was unquestionably a true
