COL. MCCLURE AT THE WIGWAM AGAIN.

Fusion Entombed and Epitaphed.

THE MORAL OF THE VICTORY

From the Philadelphia News of Monday, Oct. 15.] An immense and most enthusia stic meetin of the friends of Lincoln and Hamlin, met at the Wigwam again on Saturday evening, Gen. James Irvin in the chair. After the meeting was organized, Mr. McClure, Chairman of the People's State Committee, was introduced by the President, and received with deafening and protracted cheers. When order was restored,. he said:

Pennsylvania has spoken, and a nation re-loices at its own di-enthralment. [Applause.] The ray of hope that has at times dawned upo our beggared industry, and again gone out in darkness as the power of Democracy has asserted its supremacy, now breaks into the noon-day of promise, and gladness beams from thousands of eyes, which have long told in silent eloquence, the sad story of a faithless Government. [Protracted applause.]

The rich Western wilds, ordained by Nature's law as the abode of freedom, clad with beauty and teeming with richness, have been consecrated to free labor and the triumphs of peaceful progress by the solemn verdict of the great Key-stone of the Federal Arch. [Cheers.] Sec-tionalism and disunfonism, the twin relics of tionalism and disunfonism, the twin relies of prostituted power, have heard the thunders of every loyal Pennsylvania, and hide their hideous heads in shame. [Shouts of applause.] The coming man, Abraham Lincoln, [destening applause,] now well assured by the nation that in him its highest hopes centre, [applause,] is greeted by friend and foe, by North and South, as a FATTHFUL, HONEST MAN—as one whose rule will be enlightened, liberal, patriotic and just.

[Deafening cheers for Lincoln.]
I rejoice with you at the election of Andrew G. Curtin. Loud and long cheers for Curtin.]. He has neither place or official favor that I could desire, but I rejoice with the thousands and hundreds of thousands in Pennsylvania who struggle for him with a singleness of purpose looking only to a faithful government and the redemption of a common country. [Applause.] He has discharged his whole duty in this great struggle. He unfurled his banner, declaring for truth and freedom to the people in every section of the State, and defended the right with ceaseless energy and matchless eloquence.— [Applause] Over one hundred times has be addressed the citizens of Pennsylvania, and never purposely concealed a conviction or a preference. He was the same to all men—for Lincoln, Hamlin and Curtin, [applause,] and the principles their friends advocate everywhere, whether in the giddy whirl of comwhere, whether in the glddy whirl or commerce or amongst the sturdy arms that drag forth the slumbering wealth of our mountains, or sow their seed and reap their rich harvests in our vallies. [Applause.] He has taken our standard, with our winciples emblayoned on at in letters of living light, and borne it through sunshine and storm—through evil and good reast through these and the series and here. port—through fusion and confusion, and has returned it to us unsullied by a single stain of dishonor, and with victory streaming from its ample folds! [Applause.]

I know how high is the measure of public expectation; what rich fruits they hope for from this triumph. The State has a right to expect that the principles we have advocated shall be faithfully administered in the Govern-ment, and their full fruition enjoyed by our long suffering people; and I am proud to say that to this task Andrew G. Curtin is fully equal. [Applause.]

The speaker then referred to the great obstacles over which Col. Curtin had won such a brilliant triumph, and he spoke of the fusion movements in pungent terms. He said we have had fusion; blue spirits, black spirits and grey had combined, and made common cause against Col. Curtin, but the more the leaders fused the more the rank and file confused. son's Mountain Herb Fills," has spent the greater part of his life in travelling, having visited nearly every country in the world He spent over six years amon the Rocky Mountains and of Mexico, and it was thus that the "Mourtain Harb Pills," were discovered. Elisan established fact, that all diseases arise from the stablished fact, that all diseases arise from the blood is the life! and when any foreign or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is once distributed to every organ of the body. Every nerve feels the poison, and all the vital organs quickly.complain. The stomach will not digest the food perfectly. The liver ceases to secrete a sufficiency of bile. The action of the heart secrete a sufficiency of bile. The action of the heart secrete a sufficiency of bile. The action of the heart secrete a sufficiency of bile. The lungs become clogged with the poisonous matter; hence a cough—and all from a slight impurity of the fountain head of life—the Blood! As it you had thrown some carth, for instance, in a pure spring, from which ran a thry rivule in a few minutes the whole course of the stream begrowed; the lamp of life soon dies out.

This ergilis not only purity disclosely but the obstructions of the lamp of life soon dies out.

This ergilis not only purity disclosely but the obstructions of the lamp of life soon dies out.

This ergilis not only purity disclosely but the obstructions of the body, they are, therefore, unrivalled as a contrary to all ordinary rules of warfare, the post of danger and disgrace, the Bell tricksters were, by common consent, assigned that position. [Shouts of laughter.] The Douglas men and the Breckinridge men fought shy, and guarded well the way of retreat, as it was settled between them that however terrible the dis-aster, none but the Bell men should fall without a future: [Laughter.] Thus they entered the fight, but the battle had scarcely began before it was discovered that the mongrel camp was studded with side-fights between its own allies, of the deadliest character. Butler is chosen to Congress in the first district, thanks to the perfidious fire in the rear from the Breckinridge men; [laughter,] and Nicholas goes to the Sen-ate, thanks to the vengeance of the Douglas men. [Shouts of laughter.] Judge King was slaughtered by common consent—nobody ever meaning to elect him. His mission was to pull Foster chesnuts out of the fire and burn his fingers by way of reward. [Laughter and applause.] Brodhead fell by the mingled stupidity of the Democracy and the selfish huckstering of the Bell men. Fuller's committee was made to telegraph all over the State on the day of election, giving the cheering intelligence that the Bell men were going solid for Foster whereupon the Bell men in the rural district voted for Curtin, and the Foster men bet their money and lost it: [Laughter.] In return for this important official aid of the Bell Commit they protested against voting for Know Noth inge, and threatened to smash the whole machine. [Shouts of laughter.] The leaders, knowing that shillalies never miss fire, [shouts of laughter.] were driven from their plighted faith, and Bigler was seized with his old complaint, said to be a peculiar affection of the knees, [laughter,] and had to yield to the reign of confusion in the fusion camp. [Shouts of laughter and applause.] But even a violation of all faith could not drive the Bell hucksters to the aversies of a company maked. to the exercise of a common manhood. True to the exercise of a common mannoon. Irus, they had lost their honest and independent men, cave a few who did not fully comprehend the fraud; but the leaders who offered themselves and their men to the Democracy, for cash or approved political produce, to serve either in regular or guerilla warfare, could not be spurned from the free trade camp, for the political world beside offered them no resting place. [Applause.] "When it was apparent, but a few days before the election, that not a Democratic vote could be had in Philadelphia for a Bell candidate, except it should came standed with treachery to some better man, they then resolved their little band into camp followers, pursued the free trade and dismion train, and sought to divide the Lindisunton train, and sought to divide the Lincoln forces so that their owners might conquer. [Long continued applause.] They ran Judge King to defeat Butler, and thereby sent Butler to Congress. [Laughter and applause.] They, ran Fuller to defeat Morris, and Morris goes back indebted to their mingled imbecility and ferocity for his success. [Laughtern.] They ran Rittenhouse to defeat Davis, and the house of Ingersoil mourns the loss of a hopeful son of a noble sire. (Shouts of laughter and applause.) or ingersor mouries are less of an applicable. So succeeded Verree by 22 majority, and so triumphed Kelley. They ran their City ticket to give success to their free trade masters, and thanks to their stubility, Messis. Harmer, White, Moore and Conrad, the People's candi white, moore and contact the reopie's candidates, will be snugly installed into the fattest of offices. [Applause] And when the work was done, they paraded the streets with free trade banners flying, utterly oblivious of figures, shouting themselves hoarse over their own timely end, even hours after their pitiful nothingness and disgraceful failure had been manifested by the stubborn rule of simple addition.

[Protracted applause.] That each fusion wing cheated the other, either in purpose or in strength, and meant to do so from the start was apparent to every intelligent mind. In this they defied not only the dictates of a common humanity, but also violated that greatest safe guard of tricksters, the honor common among rogues. [Laughter rnd applause.] These remarks do not apply to the many in Philadelphia who honestly preferred John Bell for the Presidency, but who refused to be bartered like sheep in the shambles to free trade and disunion: Many, very many, who would have chosen John Bell for a standard bearer before A by hard Jungala, promittly asserted their fore Abraham Lincoln, promptly asserted their own majesty, and voted for Colonel Curtin on Tuesday last, and will vote to swell the thouman with us in securing and enjoying the crowning glory of this revolution will be lasting crowning national triumph of the age, that tranquility. Had success crowded the efforts of fusion, the world might have overlooked, in ome degree, the maddened recklessness of those who traded on John Bell. But the history of our political struggles presents no parallel to the defeat and disgrace of these men. They ragged themselves, and the honored name of their standard-bearer, into the festering arms of Free Trade and Disunion Democracy, and have gone down with it, mingled with its corruption, and shrouded in the deepest cloud of its dishonor. [Applause.] Of all their candi-dates, not one survives the sweeping annihilaion—not a moment is left on which the hand of charity might warn future tricksters of their of charity might warn future tricksters of their fate. [Applause] And to add to their disgrace, the Democratic State Committee yesterday spurned their association, and rejected them by a formal vote. They asked but a place to die and be entombed, where forgetfulness might kindly overshedow them; but even that boon was denied them. getful that we have a great State—an empire within itself—that has made Philadelphia its child of fortune; and that the interests of City and State are harmonious as the spheres themselves. This vital truth has gained a footing here which all the madness of sectionalism cannot destroy. The time for intimidating our commerce is past, [applause,] and Phila-delphia will, on the 6th of November, send greeting to the Union her crushing verdict against free trade, against disunion and against treason and national discord, come whence they may. [Applause.] It will declare, in terms not to be misunderstood, in favor of the industry that has reared its commerce and made the sails of its ships whiten every sea. It will declare in favor of that policy that will call our sturdy sons of toil to requited labor, carry gladness to their homes, and bring forth the untold millions of wealth that slumber in the bowels of our mountains—a policy that will make new and fruitful fields whose now is desolation and waste; that will rear new homes, new schools, and scatter broadcast over our State the rich fruits of enlightened progress and national prosperity. [Applause.]

It will be a verdict for the honor, the happiness, the prosperity of free labor. [Applause.]
Nor will its fruits stop with reviving our great industrial interests of Pennsylvania. It will reach from the far East, where the noble Hamlin [applause,] pleads for labor, a way to the sueset side of the father of waters, where blooming prairies wait for the great National verdict that is to consecrate them to free labor, and, plant them as new stars in the spangled galaxy of States upon our flag. [Deafening applauser].

And it will go further still. It will proclaim to every clime the dignity of labor, and declare to the world that henceforth the settled policy. of this mighty, confederacy is to foster, to honor, and to requite the basis of all its greatness its free industry. [Applause.] It will swell with emotion and pride thousands of free hearts that have been degraded by the menial labor of the slave by their side, and reassert the mandate of Him who created us, and bid us toil, by honoring those whose strong arms and willing hearts scatter beauty and bounty around us. [Applause.] It will plant free homes upon millions of acres now glowing in native richness. It will make the iron horse traverse the trackless prairies; it will point the spires of churches to Heaven, where the red man now shouts the war-whoop; it will bring golden harvests to swell the tide of your commerce; it will rear empire upon empire, to add to the common strength, the common glory of the Republic. [Protracted applause.]

These are the rich offerings of this great revolution, and they will invade no-rights of sister States. The triumph will be a triumph for the whole Union. [Applause.] It will be a victory over sectionalism. The South may stand saide, and give no State to, swell the achievement which will converse to thousands ment; but it will carry gladness to thousands and thousands of men who have long hoped for and thousands of majority for Lincoln in this City on the dawn of this epoch upon our land. It will the majority for Lincoln in this City on the dawn of this epoch upon our land. [Shouts of approtection and slavery restriction, and who plause.] He has gone through this embittered struggle without the breath of suspicion seeking to dim his integrity. That he is honest every tongue confesses, and he will bring to the ad-ministration of the government a mind stored with wisdom, a heart abounding in patriotism. He will be faithful to the whole Union. [Protracted applause.] If there is a man North or South who seeks to fling the banner of sectionalism over this mighty brotherhood of States, he is no friend of Abraham Lincoln. [Applause.] He will terminate the mad career of sectionalism that has made Wrong insolent, and Right submissive; that has degraded labor, broken up the sacred landmarks of the Constitution, and plunged us into the maelstrom of fraternal strife. [Applause] He will recognize a North, but rever can be forgetful that the South has common claims with us upon the Government; that they are our brethren, bound to us by the ties of language, of blood, of interest, and all the hallowed memories of the past; and to them he will be just, and only just to all. [Shouts of applause.]

The speaker then discussed at some length, the positions of Douglas and Breckinridge, showing that both were for free trade, and that both were the representative men of the wicked agitators who have disturbed the harmony of the country. He said Douglas had wontanly revived the agitation of the slavery question, by the repeal of the Missouri Compromise; and that Breckinridge was to-day the candidate of those who are constantly agitating the dismem-hormout of the Union. He said, however, that berment of the Union. He said, however, that the time for concern about the dangerous doc-Let me here be just to Gen. Foster. The organization of the content of and Indiana nad settled the national concessing aimst them. He alluded also to the character of the triumph, it was, he said, unsustained by fraud, undimmed by purchase. The organization that had carried the cause of Lincoln, Hamlin and Curtin to victory in Pennsylvania had done so with clean hands, and mean to keep them so. [Applause.] Wherever the charge of fraud was preferred, whether by friend or foe, let the light of truth test the integrity of men, and let justice be done though

But however Brodhead may have fared in getting his promised share of lovertaps, the Fuller votes were missing just at the momentous crisis, when the boxes were counted. [Laughter and applause.] It seems that every step taken by the fusion leaders but thickened the thorns in their path. The marketable Bell men were first brought into the embrace of free trade and dismined by the promise that they should have Fuller, and perhaps King, sent to Congress, and their whole city ticket elected, with here and there an Assemblyman.
