CURBS GUERRAFIED. THE inventor and manufacturer of "Jud-

THE inventor and manufacturer of "Judson's Mountain Herb Pills," has spent the greater part of his life in traveiling, having visited nearly every country in the world He spont over six years amon the Rocky Mountains and of Mexico, and it was thus that the "Mountain Herb Pills" were discovered. A very interesting account of his adventures there, you will find in our Almanac and Pamphlet.

It is an established fact, that all diseases arise from Impure History and the way foreign or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is once distributed to every organ of the body. Every nerve feels the poison, and all the vital organs quickly complain. The stomach will not digest the food perfectly. The liver ceases to secrete a sufficiency of bile. The action of the heart is weakened, and so the circulation is feeble. The lungs be come clogged with the poisonous matter; hence a cough—and all from a slight impurity of the fountain-head of life—the Blood! As if you had thrown some earth, for instance, in a pure spring, from which ran a tiny rivuletin a few minutes the whole course of the stream becomes disturbed and discolored. As quickly does impure blood fly to every part, and leave its sting behind. All the passages become obstructed, and unless the obstruction is removed, the lamp of life soon dies out.

These pills not only purify the blood, but regenerate all the secretions of the body, they are, therefore, unrivalled as a

Females who value health, should never be without these Pills. They purify the blood, remove obstructions of all kinds, cleanse the skin of all pimples and blotches, and bring the rich color of health to the pale cheek.

AGT The Plants and Herbs of which these Pills are made, were discovered in a yery surprising way among. the Texucans, a tribe of Aborigines in Mexico. Get the Almanac of our Agent, and you will resd with delight, the very interesting account it contains of the "Great Medicans" of the Aztecs.

From the N. Y. Commercial Advertiser. The Supply and Price of Gold.

Shall we ever possess a fixed, infallible measure of value, as we have measures of weight and measures of quantity? It is exceedingly doubtful whether any thing more accurate than an approximation to the true standard in the first case, can be arrived at; certainly none has yet been discovered. Are we referred to the precious metals? Unfortunately the relative values of these toward each other are constantly changing; and seldom in two countries can they be found precisely alike at the same time. Their fluctuations in price may be less visible than those of flour or cotton; but beyond a question they are equally subject to the law of mutability. To paper money? This is still less trustworthy; because the machinery which regulates it is more complicated, and at best it is but the representative of gold or silver currency. To provisions? The prices of these rise and fall with the supply and demand, being seldom for two weeks the same. To real estate? That, too, is governed by a variety of considerations, among others, the destiny and increase of population. To labor? What has been more changeable for the last three years? To a result obtainable from mingling all these together, as metals are amalgamated? Perhaps some rule will yet be evolved out of them, which will approach nearest to the actual fact; yet there is little reason to expect that it will be absolutely correct. How much is a dollar, or if you prefer it, one hundred cents? will re main a puzzling question for generations to main a puzzing question for generations to come.

M. Chevalier, whose work on the probable fall of gold has lately been reviewed in the Edinburgh Quarterly, estimates that since the discovery of gold in California, the quantity of that metal added to the general circulation has advanced from $12,500,000 to $190,000,000 per annum; and that the aggregate, up to last year, was about equal to the whole products of all the gold mines in the world, from the disall the gold mines in the world, from the discovery of America by Columbus to 1848. In other words, a period of less than twelve years has produced as much gold as did one of 356 years previously. Yet there is no appearance of exhaustion on the part of these mines. On the contrary, new and extensive deposits have since been discovered in the Rocky Mountains; while improved feelilities and machines for while improved facilities and machines for separating the ore from the earth, are constantly being invented. The supply is more likely to increase than to fall off, and to all appearance may so continue for the next half century, when the quantity in circulation will almost exceed belief. Were even the Australian mines to fail altogether, the product of our own will be reckoned by thousands of millions.

It is well known that consequences of the first magnitude were brought about by the precious metals shipped to Europe after the discovery of this continent. Commerce burst from the shackles with which it had been bound; colonies were established by Spain, France, Holland, and England, in the East and West; manufacturing industry sprang up at the same time, and the nations awoke to a new career of prosperity, in spite of the bloody and senseless prosperity, in spite of the bloody and senseless wars waged by the crowned heads of Europe. The rate of legal interests gradually declined from ten per cent, which it had been as late as Henry the Eighth's reign, to five, in Queen Anne's. At the same time there was a slow but steady improvement in the wages paid for labor, compared with the cost of living.

What may we suppose will be the consequences of the present immense supply of gold in the great world's fair? We have shown what were some of these during the period which elapsed previous to the discovery of that metal in California; it is reasonable to expect similar changes henceforth, and these in proportion to the vastly increased volume thrown upon the market. The general result of an addition to the supply of any article is a diminution in price, as in the cases of labor, provisions, lux-uries and real estate. There is no reason to doubt that the precious metals are subject to this law as well as tobacco or Indian corn; but the difficulty consists in detecting its operation, inamuch as the size, weight and name of a certain piece of gold, termed a dollar, remain unchanged. Persons may be fully convinced that the earth has two motions; but the point is to see or feel it stirring. So with alterations in the value of gold and silver.

It may be supposed that this difficulty can be overcome by observing an advance in the prices of every commodity bought and sold with these metals, as one end of the scales rise while the other is sinking. But here we are met with another difficulty. The cost of provisions, for example, is also regulated by supply and de-mand, and in th changes produced by abund-ance or the contrary it is almost impossible to detect the influence of the rise and fall in money, the latter motion being impeeceptibly slow and its operations hard to be understood, except by those who have examined carefully the mechanism by which it is produced. Then again, abundance of money is likely to stimu-late producers of other articles to bring to market an increased supply of them; while discoveries and improvements introduced may have the effect of cheapening prices still further.— In a word, unless agriculture remained at a stand-still, and the quantity brought to market continued the same in proportion to the de-mands, the fall in price of the precious metals could not thereby he detected wity accuracy.—

An approximation can be got by comparing averages for a term of years; but even this re-sult must be regarded as subject to many exceptions.

Nor can the decline in value of gold be ascertained by a comparison of it with any other metal, silver for example. The reason is equally plain. The supply and demand of the latter may also be changing every year. Mill-ions of it may be absorbed by the Hindoos or Chinese; the American mines may yield an unusually short supply Besides, as soon as gold has been poured forth in sufficient quantity to become cheaper than silver, it begins to replace the latter, lengthening its arm of the scale at the expense of its neighbor, and thus tending to restore an equilibrium between them.

to restore an equilibrium between them.

In fact, such a change has been taking place, to a great extent, in France, during the last few years. M. Chevalier shows that since 1852 that country has parted with $225,000,000 of silver, the greater part of which has gone to the East; while $500,000,000 of gold has been coined in the same time. The specie drained from France has added to the circulation of other countries, and thus produced a vacum. other countries, and thus produced a vacum, into which the gold has discharged itself to a still greater extent. The gold coins in France are as small as in the United States, and thus render a less quantity of silver necessary to conduct the business of the country than in England. Descrice.—An old proverb says: "A little in the morning is enough, enough at dinner is but little; but a little at night may be too much." Remember this, and says indigestion and sleepless nights.
