PROCLAMATION.

FELLOW CITIZENS:-The revolutions of the year have again brought us to our annual festival of Thanksgiving to Almighty God. In no preceding year have we had more abundant cause for gratitude and praise. The revolving seasons have brought with them health and plenty. The summer fruits and the autumn harvests have been gathered and garnered in unwonted exhuberance, A healthful activity has pervaded all the departments of life; and provident industry has met with a generous reward. The increase of material wealth has been liberally employed in sustaining our Educational and Religious Institutions; and both are making the most gratifying progress in enlightening and purifying the public mind.-While, in Europe, central and absolute governments, by their pressure on personal rights and liberty, are producing excitements, which threat en to upheave the very foundations of society, and have led, in some instances, to bloody and cruel wars, we, in the enjoyment of constitutional liberty, and under the protection of just and equal laws, are peacefully pursuing the avocations of life, and engaging in whatever promises to advance our social and individual improvement and happiness. "The lines are," indeed, "fallen to us in pleasant places, and we have a goodly heritage. In all this we see the orderings of a kind and merciful Providence, which call not only for our recognition, but for our public Thanksgiving and Praise.

Under this conviction, I. WILLIAM F. PACK. ER Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, do hereby appoint THURSDAY, THE TWENTY-NINTH DAY OF NOVEMBER NEXT, to be observed as a day of public Thanksgiving and Prayer, and recommend to all our people, that setting aside, on that day, all worldly pursuits, they assemble in their respect ive places of worship, and unite in offering. Thanks to God for his manifold goodness, and imploring his forgiveness, and the continuance of his field they have discovered. A very missing energies.

At Vesuvius, a red hot current of it was from ten to eight yards deep, two hundred or three hundred yards broad, and nearly a mile long.

In Mexico, a plain was filled up with it into a mountain one thousand six hundred feet high, by an eruption in 1759. Its heat was so great that it continued to smoke for twenty years afterwards, and a piece of wood took fire three years and a half after it had been ejected, at five miles from the crater. Stones of immense size rise to the height of seven thousand feet, and others, darkening the air, fall one hundred Thirty-one great eruptions of Ætna have occhired within the record of history. In an emption in 1693, the city of Catania was over-turned in a moment, and 18,000 poeple perished in the ruins. The crater of Etna is a quarter of a mile high, on a plain three miles across. The mouth is a mile in diameter, and shelves core, lines with salts and sulphur. The contral fiery galf varies in size, and noises arise from it, with volumes of smoke. D'Orville descended by ropes near the gulf, but was an noved by flames and sulphurous effluvia. Pompeii was destroyed by showers of ashes, and Herculaneum by hot mud, over which six streams of lava have since accumulated. They had recently been destroyed by an earthquake, and were rebuilding. In the barracks of Fom-peil were found the skeletons of two soldiers fastened by chains; and in the vault of a country house was a perfect cast of a woman with a child in her arms.

We frequently hear persons remark that it is a fearful thing to die; but seldom do we hear them say its a fearful thing to live. It may be a fearful thing to die (certaioly a solemn one); but to me it seems more solemn, more fearful, to live. That is a solemn hour when we gaze upon the pallid cheek of a loved and dying one—when we feel the last pressure of those lips upon ours—when the last farewell is faintly whispered—and to the dying one it may be solemn to leave earth and its loved objects, and to enter the "dread unknowe;" but surely one need not fear to die who has thought,

Prof. Hitchcock, in his chapter on the "Tele graph System of the Universe," introduces the remarkable theory, that our words, our actions, even our very thoughts, make an indelible im-pression upon the universe; that "not a word has ever escaped from mortal lips, but it is registered indelibly upon the atmosphere we breathe." Whether this be true or not, it is certain that we all have an influence, and that this influence is continually exerted for good or ill upon all around us. Knowing this, how cautiously should we tread life's pathway; ever keeping a sentinel at the door of our mind, that no evil thought enter, and at our mouth, that no evil word go out. - Moore's Rural New Yorker.

Another Horrible Mystery Explained.

The Troy, (N. Y) Times says that about three years ago a young woman named Catherine H., employed in one of the collar factories of the city—a good looking, intelligent and spirited girl—disappeared from her home. She left in the early evening, saying that she was going to a ball, and did not return. Her clothing was all left behind uncalled for. Diligent inquiries were water which she had been seen at the beline were made. She had been seen at the ball until after midnight, but no one knew when she left for home, or in whose company. An advertisement published in the Times produced no answer: Time passed, and the minds of her relatives settled upon the conclusion that she must have abandoned home—cloping perhaps, in company with some seducer; perhaps going off alone to seek excitement and amusement in a vortex of dissipation elsewhere. The conclusion was favored by her known repugnance to her employment here—and her love of disp ay and festivities.

But, within a few days, the almost banished subject has been revived by the receipt of an anonymous letter which conveys the starting anonymous letter which courty's the state ing announcement that Catherine was murdered; that, on leaving the ball, in company with a young man, they proceeded together to a block above, and took a carriage, after driving a short distance; three other fellows got into the carriage, that instance of the large that it is the carriage. riage; that, instead of taking the girl home, they started together for the Arbany road, and they started together for the 'A'bany road, and when she remonstrated, stifled her voice by placing a shawl over her head; that, after perpetrating horrible outrages, the reffians killed Catherine, by strengling her, and threw her body into the Island Creek, below Altany—her clothing, with the exception of the undergarments, being destroyed, and that the body was found three or four weeks after the crime,
