THE inventor and manufacturer of "Jud-HE inventor and manufacturer of "Judson's Mountain Herb Fils," has spent the greater part of his life in travelling, having visited nearly every country in the world He spent over six years amon the Rocky Mountains and of Mexico, and it was thus that ha "Mountain Herr Pills" were discovered. A very interesting account of his adventures there, you will find

It is an established fact, that all diseases arise from IMPURE BLOOD!

The blood is the life I and when any foreign or unhealthy matter gets mixed with it, it is once distributed to every organ of the body. Every nerve feels the poison, and all the vital organs quickly complain. The stomach will not digest the food perfectly. The liver ceases to secrete a sufficiency of bile. The action of the heart is weakened, and so the circulation is feeble. The lungs be come clogged with the poisonous matter; hence a cough—and all irom a slight impurity of the fountain-head of life—the Blood! As if you had thrown some earth, for instance, in a pure spring, from which ran a tiny rivuletin a few minutes the whole course of the stream becomes disturbed and discolored. As quickly does impure blood fly to every part, and leave its sting behind. All the passages become obstructed, and unless the obstruction is removed, the tamp of life soon dies out. These pills not only purify the blood, but regenerate all the secretions of the body, they are, therefore, unrivalled as a CURE FOR BILIOUS DISEASES.

CURE FOR BILIOUS DISEASES. Liver Complaint, Sick Headache, &c. This Anti-Billou Medicine expels from the blood the hidden seeds of disease, and renders all the fluids and secretions pure and fluent, clearing and resuscitating the vital organs.

old sybil tells upon you.

But let us come down from our airy perch on the Capitol, and descend bodily into the Forum below. Fitteen feet below the level of modern Rome it lies—a wreck of columns and temples—the pavement of the old Sacred Way temples—the pavement of the old Sacred Way going through it, under the trimmphal arch of Septimus Severus. Here one may see the old foundations laid in the time of republican Rome, some three thousand years ago. In a sunny spring day, when the wind is blowing the dust in your eyes, as I am sorry to say March winds always do, whether in Rome or Andover, it is quite a sheltered place to walk in this crumbling old Forum. You are admitted through a rude door at the side, kept by a janitor, who expects two pauls for his pains, and then it is all before you. You can scramble about among the old ruins, finding here a shattered bit of inscription, there an overturned capital of a Corinthian column—picking up a very large assortment of TOYS of every description. Also, FANCY BASKETS, WORK BOXES, Tobacco Boxes, Seyar Cases, Pipes, Canes and Fancy Articles of a large variety. All being imported direct from the manufacturers enables me to sell at very low prices.

Antiquarians quarrel over this Forum, and exercise their ingenuity in rebuilding it this way or that. To me the matter is of small account—whether it extended ten feet this way or that—whether this bit of pavenent is of this or that era—is all one to me.—I have no objection to him that settles it: if I have no objection to him that settles it; if

BY MRS. HARRIET BEECHER STOWE

I have been now many weeks in this sad old city—sad, sombre it must always be—with its mouldering ruins—its wide surrounding Cam-pagna—and its dark-eyed, poetic people, whom even dirt and rags cannot make vulgar or com-mon-place. I went to the top of the Capitol the other morning. It was a clear, lovely day, and as we stood in the little stone balcony of the crowning tower, the custode counted out to us the seven hills of Rome—now scarcely to be distinguished, covered with buildings. We saw how the old city had been cradled on all sides, like some gigantic infant, in a circle of sur-rounding mountains, which, raising now in rounding mountains, which, raising now in snowy, silvery clearness, seemed to cut the blue horizon all around.

In the spring of the year, the snow upon these mountains gives them, through the purple veil of Italian air, all the picturesque and dreamy grace of Alpine peaks. Their outlines are, many of them, peculiarly bold and graceful; and one looks on them with interest, because they can be always of landscape they could cause they are features of landscape that could not have been changed. Such as they are to us this morning, such they looked to Cicero and Virgil and to Cæsar—to thousands of eyes eyes now shut forever. One thing strikes one in a panorama of Rome the deficiency in trees. As one stands on the top of the Capitol, nothing like foliage strikes the eye in that great circle of country, bounded by mountains and centered by Rome. No groves—no forests—no tufts of trees—eak, ash, poplar, and consequent variations of undulating outline. There are but two trees which make much impression on one's eyes in the picture; and these are cypress and stone pine, and both have forms of such stony definiteness of outline, that I call them archivectural trees. They look as if they too might have been carved out of stone, like the pyramids, obclisks, and domes among which they rise, black and still, with no sway of leaf or spray, with no flutter or wave or bough, quiet and lifeless as if they belonged to that enchanted city one reads of in romance, where everything was suddenly changed to stone.

To me the sense of an oppressive deadness, a heavy lifeless stillness, seems to be the general spirit of the landscape—as if some awful doom, some spell of sinister enchantment, made the air preternaturally heavy, as one sometimes feels it before a thunder shower. From the Capitol one looks down at the broken columns of the forum for below at one's feet, and the of the forum far below at one's feet, and the endless train of workmen digging all day among the ruins, and wheeling their barrows in a slow line towards the Coliseum, seems a sort of spectral procession—so lifelessly they work, so slow-ly they move, their ragged old cloaks still worn over their shoulders in chostly succession of the old Roman toga. Ruins of men—shadows of Romans—dark-eyed, hollow-checked, picking aimlessly at the grave of old Rome, powerless and unreflecting—five cents a day their wages, and their work according. There they pick feebly over spots where the old hard-handed plebians of Rome made good their cause in many a hard election, bringing in their tribunes of the people in the face of all that patrician rank and power could do. Surely these are cheets of Romens in a ghostly form are ghosts of Romans in a ghostly form.

The coloring that invests the whole landscape of Rome is of that wonderous brightness, that golden richness of tone, which always reconciles one to the want of freshness and green, and of that vivacious motion which pervades an English or American landscape.

The peculiar crange-colored lichen which clings to buildings here, gives a golden tone to every roof, and the air shimmers at every hour of the day with fluttering prismatic lights and warm shadows. Even the black obelisk of the cypress and the umbrella-shaped stone pine have their opalescent changings of purple, lilac, and gold, as a morning and evening sun floods them with light. One does not wonder that artists fall in love with old Rome—the mistress of enchantments—and that they say to her, in dirt, in rags, in filth, in ignomy, "Thou art my mistress. I would not change thee for the cleanliest and sweetest good housewife in the world." One only wants to drop humanity out of their circulation, to live merely in the artistic and picturesque, to feel thus themselves. One feels the enchantment working—the weired old sybil tells upon you. have their opalescent changings of purple, lilac
