CONCENTRATED LEAVEN is the result of careful chemical research. All its ingredicular properties in the highest state of purity, and compounded with a view to produce bread of a far better quality, and in much less time, than by any other process; and by the manufacturers submit it, with entire centiuence, to the judgment of descriminating house-keepers, bukers, &c.

Bread of all kin's made by using Concentrated Leaven is it, incr. more digestible and nuitritious; has an agreea, ble, natural taste; is less liable to sour; will retain its moisture longer than by any other process, and the woole preparation for the oven need not exceed ten minutes.

moisture longer than by any other process, and the whole preparation for the oven need not exceed ten minutes.

It is valuable because it is not perishable, and may be rendered available in places and at times when yeast is not within reach, as at sea. In all climates and under all circumstances, it may be adopted, thus obtaining all cifficulty of precuring yeast or other ferme t, which is frequently of an inferior quality, ret dering the bread more or less unwholesome.

It is also valuable as regards economy, as it has been ascertained that a saving is effected in the flour of not less than 16 per cent. In the common process much of the sucharine of the flour is list by being converted into carbouic acid gas, or spirit, and the waste is incurred solely for the purpose of genorating gas to raise the dough. By using Concentrated Leaven this waste is avoided, and the gas obtained in a manner equally effections. Ferrmentation, as has been stated, destroys a part of the flour or meal, and, in consequence, a barrel of flour weighing 196 hs, which, by the con mon method, or or meal and the continuous process 290 hs, thus effecting the very important saving of 16 per cent in the quantity of flour. By conformity to the directions on each package, any person capable of ordinary attention may conduct the process, and the result will invariably be highly satisfactory.

White Hall Hotel, de?

Harrisburg, Pa. "Oh. mother! mother!" panted Edward and Ira Reynolds, as they burst into the sitting room on their return from school, 'we're going to have an exhibition, Christmas night, at the Academy, and there is to be a stage built, and we are to speak there.'

"One at a time-one at a time, my dear children," said Mrs. Reynolds, as she re-moved Ida's hood and smoothed Edward's short, crisp locks, which had the most provoking inclination to tangle themselves over his eyes.

But the two voices, scarcely pausing for the mother's warning, struck up simul-taneously again; but Edward was soon obliged to yield to Ida, (I believe girls usually come off victor in these verbal strifes,) and she went on:

"We are to have a piano, and Miss Hall is to play it; and we are all to sing together, and then to speak poems and dialogues; and the girls are to wear white dresses, with blue ribbons around their waists .-Oh, goody! goody!" And she danced about the room, her bright braids flashing about her neck, and her eyes shining in her young face like twinkling lights; and her mother watched her with that tender, loving smile which makes the tace of a mother beautiful and sacred as no other faces are.

"We are to have our pieces to-night, Mr. Murray said," interposed Edward, and we are to practice all our spare time."

"Well, we'll see to it all, my dears. But there goes the dinner bell, and I know two little people who won't sacrifice that, even to the contemplation of a Christmas anniversary," laughed the lady, as she rose up and folded her sewing.
"Why, father, you seem a little blue to-night," said Mrs. Reynolds, looking into her husband's face, just after the children had gone up stairs for the night. "Do I, Anne?" rallying at once. "Well, the truth is, I've been a good deal perplexed with business matters to-day. I'll forget all about it now."

"Well, what shall it be?"

"In the first place, they must each have a new suit for the anniversary. Their little heads are full of nothing else from morning they are. Well, is that all?" "Oh, no; we can't afford them a Christ-

> "Why, Ida, my child, what has kept you so long? Eddie's been home half an hour, and I really began to be alarmed at your absence," exclaimed Mrs. Reynolds, as her daughter came in from school, just as the night shadows were loosening themselves down through the short December day.
