PRAYER FOR THE UNION.—Rev. Dr. Yeomans, of Danville, Moderator of the last General Assembly of the Presbyterien Church, (O. S.,) has issued an address to the churches represented in that body, recommending the observance of tomorrow as a day of prayer, in view of the threatening aspect of public affairs. He had previously appointed another day for this purpose, but after the proclamation of the President appeared, he concluded to recommend the same. The address was read last Sabbath from the pulpit of the Old School Presbyterian Church of this city, and in compliance therewith, a prayer meeting will be held in the lecture room of the church to-morrow morning at ten o'clock, to which all who love the Union and desire its perpetuity are invited. votes at our elections is a growing evil. All parties denounce it, yet all practice it. It has become so much a matter of course, that the rule is to deem 'a man certainly defeated who does not submit to excessive assessments to corrupt the franchise. They are exceptions who do not expend more to secure an office than it is worth per annum. And yet the crime of selling their suffrage is by no means as general among the people as might be inferred from the amount of money extorted from men in nomination. More than fifty per cent of all money thus raised is stolen by those to whom its expenditure is entrusted. It is not merely the penniless vagabond who sells his vote. Men occupying respectable positions in society-independent farmers, and well-to-do artisans and business men -often place themselves upon the low level of the wretches whose garments are reeking with the fumes of the grog-shop or jail, and chaffer for their "egg" quite as pertinaciously. This Practice is incalculably demoralising. Its injurious influence is not limited to elections. It is seen and felt elsewhere, in the dishonorable and mercenary habits which it engenders. To receive bribes strips men of their manhood, and fosters a spirit at war with every noble virtue. It is debasing every way, and should be frowned upon by decent men of all parties. But will it be? Not so long as the law permits or winks at it. It is not an evil which can be eradicated by public sentiment alone. While all parties would be glad to be relieved from the seeming necessity of the evil, no single party dares initiate the reform. Each being eager for success, each will employ the most available means to achieve what they covet. The law must interpose. It is practicable for it to do so. Public sentiment would justify a stringent enactment. Severe penalties should be imposed, and a test oath might be drafted which would make summary work of the whole system. There have a remedy, but nothing approximating efficiency has been yet proposed. If some competent legislator would make this subject a speciality, and secure the enactment of a law which would of the Atlantic to the Pacific. Try the article and be even mitigate the evil, be would be recognised a public benefactor.

Those who have brought this calamity upon us ought to humble themselves into the dust to make amends for their wicked actions.-During one of the memorable pilgrimages of Mahomet through a dreary desert, one evening after a weary march his followers prepared to camp for the night.
