What is Conservatism.

We notice that a number of Democratic sheets, and their attendant demagogues, are assailing the Republican party as lacking in conservatism, because its leaders refuse to accept the thousand and one plans of accommodation prepared for them by the Constitution-tinkers at Washington. Some have even gone so far as to aver that if civil war is the result of the present complications, the guilt thereof will fall on the Republicans. Under any other circumstances a charge of this character would deserve only contempt, but at the present time the prevalence of such an idea, ridiculous as it is, may possibly have serious consequences. Still, we have very little to say in reply, more than this: ples of right and wrong—it does not imply the surrender of the Government into the hands of a vicious and rebellious minority—and more than all, it does not mean a giving up of the future destinies of this great and free republic to the domination of a clique of slave breeding oligarchs. So far as we can see, nothing less than entire and eternal submission would satisfy the demands of the secession leaders. They will have the whole or none. They will rule or ruin. This being the case, we believe that the Republicans, and the more reasonable Democrats, are prepared to fully endorse the firm and manly position of their representatives. Such submission as the South demands is out of the question, and such concessions as we could reasonably grant, without a sacrifice of honor or principle, would be unavailing—therefore we must stand firm. If nothing but a fight will answer the purposes of the rebels, much as all true patriots would regret it, a fight they can have. If they must attack United States forts, ships, arsenals and custom houses, the Government must defend the national property and punish all rioters and rebels with due severity. States, as States, are not recognized in this quarrel. There is not, and cannot be, any such thing as "coercion of a State"—Government deals altogether with individual men, owing allegiance to the United States.

THE REIGN OF TERROR.—The Southern Confederacy, published at Atlanta, Georgia, a paper which has been fighting most gallantly for the Union and the laws, says of the late election for members of the Georgia Convention:—

It is a notable fact that, wherever the "Minute Men" as they are called, have had an organization, those counties have voted, by large majorities, for immediate secession. Those that they could not control by persuasion and coaxing, they dragged and bullied by threats, jeers and sneers. By this means thousands of good citizens were induced to vote the immediate secession ticket through timidity. Besides, the towns and cities have been flooded with secession dispatches and inflammatory rumors, manufactured in Washington City for the special occasion. To be candid, there never has been as much lying and bullying practiced since the time of Sodom and Gomorrah, as has been in the recent State campaign. The fault has been emanated all the abomination that ever cursed a free people.

Mr. CAMPBELL, of Alabama, of the United States Supreme Court, has written a letter in which, among other sensible things, he says that "the territorial question is in a satisfactory condition, and had better be let alone," and that Mr. Lincoln's election is no excuse for disunion.

Senator Cameron's Position

Several of the personal enemies of Senator CAMERON, among whom may be classed the editor of the New York Tribune, have attempted to place him in a false position on the present crisis of the country, by publishing garbled extracts from some remarks made by him in the Senate on Friday last. We have patiently awaited the arrival of the Congressional Globe, in which all the speeches of both Houses are published in full, and extract the following from the same. If any reasonable man in this, or any other community, can find fault with such doctrine we would like to hear from him.—

Gen. CAMERON has always been true to his country, and there is no danger that he will desert the interests of this State or the Union. Read his remarks carefully:—

Mr. CAMERON. Mr. President, I am very sorry that the Senator from Virginia took the trouble to tell us what will be the result of a separation of this Union. The discussion between him and me is a very small affair, which I thought would have passed with a word or two from him; but when he goes on to talk about the North, charging them with treason, bloodshed and war, I must be compelled to say a word.

Mr. MASON. I charged no treason. Mr. CAMERON. I think you talked about treason took down the word at the time. I have paid careful attention to this discussion from the commencement of our meeting here. I have never heard in this Senate, on this side of it, a single man talk about treason in regard to this question. No man here on this side has ever talked about treason in regard to this side. On the contrary, everybody on this side has been for peace, and particularly desiring that nobody here should give offence to the other side. That is the feeling of my State, and that is the feeling here.

Now, if there is to be war, the gentlemen on the other side, and especially the gentleman from Virginia, bring upon us this war. Virginia has been looked up to as the mother of States and statesmen. We, who profess democratic principles, have loved her and her principles; and when she becomes recreant to her principles and to the Constitution of the United States, we look for trouble. I tell you, there is no one in Pennsylvania—and only speak for her—ever thinks of war; but if war must come, we will meet it as becomes men. But, sir, we will give up not only our prejudices, but our feelings; and, as I said before, even a portion of our principles on this subject of slavery, to gratify the South.

This country has been controlled for seventy years by the seceding interest. I have never desired, and no man in my State, of common sense, has ever desired, to bring the negro into equality with the white man. No man ever dreamed of liberating the slaves in the Southern States. We object to southern statesmen and southern politicians, and southern intrigants, working upon the prejudices of their people, so as to make them believe that the South was combined against their interests, for the purpose of elevating their men to high places in this Union. That is the feeling we have—been struck down by the South everywhere.

When the interests of Pennsylvania came up for discussion, southern men voted against us; and yet we have stood by the South and the Union; because we loved the Union, and because we had our ancient feelings for the South, and a fraternal love for southern men.

The Senator from Virginia knows I am no speaker. He said so much in reply to me that I have forgotten what he did say; but I desire to say now, in short, that if this Union falls, it will be the fault of our; it will be no act of the North. We have committed no sins. I believe their wrongs are imaginary; and as a proof of it, if they will bring forward any proof upon which they will call this question settled, the North will come in and sustain it.—Tell us what you want; tell us what your wrongs are; and then ask us to redress them. You cannot drive us to madness by bullying us, because we are your equals. We do not understand coercion, and we do not believe you have us as brave as we are; but if you want this Union preserved, let us know wherein we have done wrong, and we will try to correct it.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I think, sir, if the Senators on this side of the Chamber, and the Senators on the other side, would imitate the very laudable spirit manifested by the Senator from Pennsylvania, who has just taken his seat, certainly this Government would suffer no detriment, but I think great good might result to our common country. I see nothing in the remarks of the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. CAMERON) that justifies the spirit of this debate. I look at it as an omen of good. It comes from the Senator of a great State; a State which, perhaps, can do as much as any other in the public mind, and restore peace and harmony to a now distracted country. Sir, I believe that the Senator from Pennsylvania was sincere when he declared his willingness to do everything in his power to save the Union of these States; and though it may be true, that four or five States may have declared themselves out of this Union, if the other side of the Chamber will meet this question in the same spirit in which it has been met by the Senator from Pennsylvania, the Union will not be permanently dissolved, but it will continue in the future, as it has been in the past, not only—

"A union of lakes and a union of lands, A union which none shall sever; But it will be— A union of hearts and a union of hands, And a union of States forever."

I therefore invoke Senators on both sides to imitate the very laudable spirit manifested by the Senator from Pennsylvania. Let us raise ourselves to the height of this great argument, and the people of the whole country, North and South, East and West, will say, not only that we have manifested the right disposition, but that disposition which will insure, not only to our own benefit, but to the benefit of all ages to come.

THE RIGHTS OF MARRIED WOMEN.—Mr. Irish has introduced a bill in the Senate having for its object the protection of the rights of married women. It seems that whilst heretofore married women had possessed the legal right to carry on business as if they were unmarried—and whilst the intention of our legislators was evidently to give them the sole right to collect their own earnings—yet our Supreme Court has construed the law so as to confer the right to the husband to collect such money as she may have earned—the profits of her own labor. The design of Mr. Irish's bill intends to confer upon her the exclusive right to collect her earnings. This is eminently just, and prevents any violation of the rights which God and nature have conferred upon her.

THE editor of the Die Union, a German paper published at Galveston, recently published a paragraph signifying his love for the Union and sneeringly referring to the secession movement in South Carolina. The consequence was a mob, which included merchants and other respectable citizens, who broke into his office and completely destroyed it, making a bonfire of his printing materials. The unfortunate editor made his escape, and thus saved himself the personal indignities an excited mob had prepared for him in the shape of tar and cotton! Such scenes are not well calculated to heal the troubles that now threaten to destroy our country.

A PRAYER FOR MAJOR ANDERSON.—An Indianapolis paper says that on last Sunday, in that city, at the closing exercises of a meeting at one of the Methodist Episcopal Churches, Bishop Ames, a man of strong Douglas Democratic sympathies, though a patriot still, astonished and thrilled the congregation by the following prayer:—

"We thank thee, O God, that while treason stalks abroad in high places, there is one man who loves his country!—one man who will defend his country's flag! God bless and protect the gallant Major Anderson and his noble band!"

The "amens" which came up from the brethren around, were loud and enthusiastic, and when the congregation arose from their knees, smiles and tears were seen struggling in many a countenance.

ings here at the point of the bayonet and mouth of the cannon? Mr. GROW'S resolution was then adopted. Mr. THOMAS (Conn.) presented the resolutions of the Legislature of Tennessee in response to the resolutions of the Legislature of New York, concluding with the following: "Whenever the authorities of the latter State send a military force to the South for the purpose of coercion, the people of Tennessee will unite with the South to resist such invasion at all hazards."

The resolutions were laid on the table and ordered to be printed. The SPEAKER laid before the House a message from the President, returning with his objections, the bill for the relief of Hockaday and Leggett. Mr. ALLEN (Mass.) said this bill was in relation to the mail service, and no subject ever excited more discussion or investigation than this, and the veto was a most extraordinary proceeding on the part of the President, though the President had exercised unquestioned constitutional rights, if he thought the bill was for the amount proposed to be appropriated. The veto should not be sustained.

Mr. BRANCH sustained the President in this performing his duty. Mr. CRAIG (Mo.) and other gentlemen made remarks on the subject. The question was then taken on the passage of the bill, notwithstanding the objections of the President. The motion was negatived—yeas 81, nays 67—not made.

CONCENTRATED LEAVEN, FOR MAKING Bread, Tea-Cakes, all kinds of Pastry, &c. MANUFACTURED BY EDW. CHAMBERLIN & CO., Proprietors of Shamrock Chemical Works.

CONCENTRATED LEAVEN is the result of careful chemical research. All its ingredients are prepared in the highest state of purity, and compounded with a view to produce bread of a far better quality, and in much less time, than by any other process known to the art. It is perfectly adapted to the judgment of discriminating housekeepers, bakers, &c.

It is valuable because it is not perishable, and may be rendered available in places and at times when yeast is not within reach, as, for instance, in all climates and under all circumstances, it may be adopted, thus obviating all difficulty of procuring yeast, and the process of its frequent use of inferior quality, rendering the bread more or less unwholesome.

It is also valuable as regards economy, as it has been ascertained that over 25 per cent of the flour of no less than 10 per cent. In the common process much of the saccharine of the flour is lost by being converted into carbonic acid gas, and the waste is entirely unnecessary, as the yeast, by its fermentation, destroys a part of the flour or meal, and, in consequence, a barrel of flour weighing 106 lbs., which, by the common method, usually makes about 250 lbs. of bread, will, by using 250 lbs. of this, thus effecting the very important saving of 10 per cent in the quantity of flour. By conformity to the directions on each package, any person capable of ordinary attention may conduct the process, and the result will invariably be highly satisfactory.
