Bribery and Corruption.

The correspondent of the Philadelphia Evening Journal, and also of the Inquirer, have for some weeks past made grave charges against the present Legislature, charging the members with bribery and corruption. Such charges are easily promulgated on paper and scattered over the country by unprincipled men and letter writers, but to sustain them is another matter. For our part we have never heard such charges intimated here, and if they really exist we hope the authors of them will have an opportunity to substantiate them. We believe the present Legislature to be composed of as honest men as any of their predecessors have been—they commit no doubt errors in the passage of some bills, but there are no proof, so far as we can ferret them out, that their passage is procured by direct bribery. We hope, therefore, that a Legislative Committee may be appointed, and the writers of these letters be compelled to appear before them and produce the proof to substantiate the charges made from time to time. We are in favor of having all proper investigation instituted, and if the charges made against the Legislature are unfounded, as we believe they are, the authors ought to be severely punished. These outside rumors do great injustice to all the parties connected with our government, and ought to be silenced or substantiated.

SENATOR BOUND.—This gentleman, the talented Senator from the Northumberland district, has acquitted himself in such a way as to give entire satisfaction to the Republican party, and to win plaudits from his political opponents. In corroboration of this remark we subjoin extracts from three Democratic papers in his district: Senator Bound is giving general satisfaction to his constituents by his able course in the Senate. He is active, intelligent and ever watchful of the interests of his constituents, so much so that he is eliciting recommendation and approval even from his political opponents. Sunbury Gazette.

Hon. F. Bound, Senator from this District has acted a noble part, for which he is entitled to the thanks of his constituency.—Bloomsbury Democrat.

"We second the above sentiments. Mr. Bound has truly distinguished himself as 'the right man in the right place.' May his constituents retain him in the position which he has so nobly filled.—Berwick Gazette.

SCARCITY OF GOLD SOUTH.—Notwithstanding the influx of gold, it appears that but little of it finds its way South. Southern merchants are complaining that they have to pay five per cent. for gold with which to pay duties on their imports. A Georgia paper, referring to this, asks:—'Why is it that our banks, who control the cotton, have not an abundance of specie with which to enable our merchants to pay their duties? Will some of our merchants, who are familiar with commercial and banking operations, inform us why, with the immense influx of specie from Europe, it commands a premium of five per cent. in Savannah?' A principal reason is that the South is heavily in debt to those with whom it has traded, and it is now paying in cotton the debts which it contracted before it entered upon the hazardous path of secession. It must pay, at least in part, to obtain further credit.

Niggerism of the Secession Movement.

The influence of the negroes of the South upon their masters is much greater than is generally understood, and appears in many traits of character, and in customs social and civil, where we are not accustomed to give it recognition. The intimacy of the association between the whites and blacks in the slave States, the sensibility that exists among them as to mutual interests, and the interchange of sympathies between them, are not appreciated in the Northern States. The analyst of the phenomena of southern society will find a remarkable vindication of the humanity and force of the negro race in the impress which the slaves make upon their masters. While the distinctions that we find marked between the white men of the South, and of the North, are not altogether to be attributed to the permanent presence of the negro in one section, and his comparative absence from, and isolation in the other—much being due to climatic influences, and much more, aside from the relation of races, to the relation of slavery—we will find, after the most cautious discrimination, the African elements of character appearing largely among the whites, who are brought into the closest contact with Africans.—Men cannot be associated on any terms, without reciprocating influences. The slave imitates his master, and wears his manners as well as his clothes, at second-hand; and the master, notwithstanding the superiority of his will and mental force, receives from the slaves, who in their humble capacity are his play-fellows in childhood, and his companions in manhood, impressions that give coloring to his character, and shape his life, as certainly as the Southern sun embrowns his complexion.

It has not escaped any intelligent person's observation that even the best educated Southerners have something of the African accent and dialect. We have heard Southern members of Congress, when it would be difficult to decide by the sound, whether the speaker was a white man or a negro. There is something too of Tropical taste displayed in dress by southern people. There are more bright colors in apparel, and richness of ornament, seen in the south than in the north. A New York merchant sending dry goods to be sold on commission to Southern and Northern points, would select a larger proportion of glittering patterns for the South than for the North. In Southern newspapers we find even greater intensity of style than in the sensation sheets of the North; and there are more fantastic and grandiloquent figurative efforts, and a greater exuberance of adjectives, in Southern speeches and editorials than in the Northern staples of that sort. This is especially true of the speeches of rural politicians and the writings of the editors of newspapers published in villages. In accounting for these things, while we should not forget the temperament induced by the Southern sun, we must not overlook the part of the sons of Africa in popular education.

It was, however, left for the secession movement to show the negroism of the politics of the extreme politicians of the South. The strained dignity and vainglorious sensitiveness of South Carolina have an unmistakable flavor of the ragged pomp of Hayti; and the boasted revolution in the seven Cotton States, bears far more resemblance to a negro insurrection than to the revolt of the thirteen American colonies, with which it is so complacently compared. It is unlike a servile revolt because there are no disabilities that would be removed by a success. But there is a want of foresight, an improvidence, an incapacity to understand the plainest relations of things—a dim, giddy notion that a pyramid should stand upon its apex—illustrated in the history of secession, that is glaringly African.

The idea of rushing out of the Union to secure slave property—of making mighty war and conquering the cities of the North—of seizing the forts of New England and thence commanding the seas—of conquering Mexico, Central America and the West India Islands; the policy of taking empty forts by storm—of incurring enormous expenses now borne by the Federal Government in protecting the frontiers, and furnishing postal facilities—of expelling from their communities all whose opinions do not square with their own; the fussy war excitement when there is no danger—the financial policy of getting rich by becoming bankrupts—the cultivation of fierce, clanish prejudices—the presumption that each particular spot of cotton soil is the centre of gravity of the commercial world—the oraular and pretended original statements or crude and silly theories of government and political economy, exploded by the experience of manhood centuries ago—the taste displayed in banners bearing crescent moons, snakes, trees, and other strange devices—these things point to Congo as the Fatherland. There are no terms in which the spirit and form, history and philosophy, of the secession movement are so well condensed, as to say that it is an outbreak of niggerism.

LATE TESTIMONY. From Prof. H. N. Day, Cincinnati, Feb. 20, 1861. 'The immortal work of the Prince of English Lexicographers... The work is not that of any profane partaker of our common imperfect and fallible humanity, but that there are few, and that he was so far in advance of his age... To be, in my judgment, the best, but the only desirable dictionary of the language.'

SENTIMENT OF NEW YORK. More than ten thousand copies of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary have been placed in as many of the Public Schools of our State by the voluntary action of their several School Boards. Heartily approving the general introduction of this standard authority in Pedagogical, Orthographic, and Pronunciation, now rendered yet more valuable by the Pictorial Synonyms, 10,000 New Words and other attractive and useful features, and desirous of that uniformity of usage in these particulars, which Dr. Webster's works are so eminently fitted to secure, we cordially recommend the School Boards, the Primary, the Common School, High School and the Seminary, to all our schools, as better fitted for their use than any others with which we are acquainted.

Webster's School Dictionaries, Viz: I. The Primary. II. The Common School. III. High School. IV. Academic. V. Counting House. VI. University. These popular School Dictionaries, having been thoroughly revised within the last three or four years, being extensively regarded as the standard authority in Orthography, Definition and Pronunciation, and as THE BEST Dictionaries in use, are respectfully commended to teachers and others. They are much more extensively sold and used than all others combined.
