We heard of several families who had prepared to move to Pennsylvania on Saturday, having everything packed up the evening before, but were sadly disappointed on the following morning by learning the news that the bridges had been cut away on the line of the Northern Central Railway, and they were consequently compelled to move back to their old homes. A great many people appear to think that there is no just cause for alarm, while others are of a different opinion. A few days more, and the troubled anxiety which now fills the minds of our citizens will be settled in some manner.

The Capitol building has been converted into one wast store-house, where provisions, arms and ammunition are stored.

Before the city was perfectly safe, it was the intention of the Government to have blown up the Capitol and all the public buildings, rather than have permitted them to fall into the hands of the Secessionists. This alternative is now entirely unnecessary, owing to the perfect safety of the city.
