Discase of Imprudence.

When the mi-guided and imprudent votary of pleasure finds that he has imbited the seeds of this painful disease, it too often hapens that an ill-timed sense of shame or dread of discovery, deters him from applying to those who, from a location and respectability, can alone be friend him, delaying till the constitutional symptoms on this hors of disease make their appearance, such as ulcorated sore threat, diseased nose, notturnal pains in the heat and limbs, dimness of sight, desiness, nodes on its shin bones and arms, blotches on the h ad face and extremities, progressing with frightful rapidity, till at last the palate of the mouth or the bones of the nose fall in, and the victim of this awful disease become a horrid object of commineration, till death puts a period to his dreadful anflerings, by sending him to "that Undiscovered Country from whence no traveler returns."

It is a necleocholty fact that thousands fall victims to this terrible disease, owing to the unskilfulness of ignorant pretenders, who by the use of that Deadly Poston, Mercury, ruin the constitution and make the residue o life imperable.

The many thousands cured at this institution year after year, and the numerous important Surgical Operations performed by Dr. Johnson, witnessed by the reporters of the "Sun," "Clipper," and many other papers, notices of which have appeared again and again before the public, besides his standing as a gentleman of character and responsibility, is a sufficient guarrantee to the affilted.

THE BATTLE AT WINCHESTER.

ENNSYLVANIA VALOR VINDICATED.

The account published in relation to the rereat from Strasburg, by the column under command of Gen. Banks, and of the battle at Winchester, all agree in according to the 46th Pennsylvania regiment, Col. Joseph Knipe, the warmest and the fullest praise. A correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer gives a very full account of the stirring events of that recent from which are made and extract retreat, from which we make such extracts as was given to the regiment, at three o'clock on Saturday morning, to march immediately for Wifehester. The regiment was then encamped on the banks of a small stream called Tom's Brook, about six miles southwest of Strasburg. The order was immediately obeyed. Teats were struck, and without breakfast the men started on their march. The Forty-sixth, being the right of Acting Brigadier-General Donnelly sbrigade, moved in advance, followed by the Twenty-eighth New York, Lieutenant-Colonel Brown, (Colonel Donnelly acting as brigadier,) and the Fifth Connedicut, Lieut. Col. Chapman. (The colonel of this regiment, Col. Ferrey, is acting as brigadier-general of Gen. Shields' command.) The brigade and regimental trains, in number about one hundred and fifty wagons, had been sent on immediately in advance.

About seven o'clock the brigade arrived at Strasburg, where it was joined by Brigadier-General Gordon's brigade, Donnelly's brigade taking the advance. An hour afterwards the entire force, under command of Major-General Banks, took up the line of march for Winchester. The troops bivouacked on the Virginia shore that night, and on Monday crossed over in a ferry boat and two boats formerly used for a pontoon bridge.

The Forty-sixth is now encamped one mile from Williamsport, on the St. James College road. The men are naturally much fatigued, but are anxious and determined to return at an early day to Winchester and Strasburg.

The events of Saturday and Sunday will long be remembered by General Banks' command. Not only did they march sixty-five miles du Hampton's Pennsylvania Battery, in the mean-time remained at a point about four miles south of Strasburg, for the purpose of protecting the removal of a large quantity of commissary's stores. Finding it impossible to remove all, the soldiers were supplied, and the balance were prudently set fire to and destroyed. When the command reached Middletown, six miles this side of Strasburg, the rebel cavalry came out from the woods on the side of the road and attacked the train in front. A stampede took place among the teamsters, and while many wagons were several belonging to sutlers and refugees. The Forty-sixth immediately, by companies, placed their knapsacks, blankets, and everything that would interfere with their move-ments, upon the roadside, loaded at will, and forwarded at double quick up the turnpike as far as Newtown, about four miles distant. driv ing the rebel cavalry ahead until they reached Forty-sixth, A and K, acting as skirmishers, fired, killing two and wounding one, which Forty-sixth, A and K, acling as skirmishers, at any particular time, and he did not time fired, killing two and wounding one, which they left on the field. About eight o'clock a combined attack of in fantry and artillery was made by the Rebels upon Gordon's brigade—the right wing of the defence—and in such manner that a stand was impossible. The left wing, notwithstanding the unfortunate position of the right, stood firm, General Banks adding to their determination by his constant presence. About half-past eight o'clock an order to retreat was given, which was made in excellent order under a heavy fire of shot and shell from the rebel battery on the hill, many of the deadly missiles going through and riddling the houses of their own friends. The Forty-sixth, in solid column and in perfect order, marched through the streets in Winchester as if on dress parade. As soon as the regiment entered the town the streets re-echoed with the shots discharged from the windows of The Retreat from Strasburg the dwellings. The destined attack upon our troops was evidently well known by the people of Winchester, since no sooner had the battle commenced than the windows bristled with guns and pistols. Wherever a Union soldier was seen, there shot was fired. Not men only, but women used with effect the deadly weapons. Accurate aim was not only taken by these female fiends, but large hand grenades were thrown by them from windows, which, as they burst, proved destructive to the lives and limbs of our gallant The shots were, of course, returned, and ments, and they are believed to be in strong
