An ITEM FOR YOLUNTEERS .- We find the following item floating about on the great sea of newspaperdom, like "Japhet in search of a father," and print it for the benefit of our solthe TELEGRAPH. It contains excellent suggestions and good advice by which they may profit :

BULLETS LESS DANGEROUS THAN FEVERS.—Re cruits going to the war always talk of their return with a proviso, that the enemy's bullets do not prevent them. Yet it is an established fact that in the modern campaigns the danger to life is three to one greater from disease than from the bullet. The British army in the Crimes war lost 33 043 out of 94,000 troops. Of these, only 2658 were killed in action; and only 1761 died of their wounds. But 16,298 died of disease at the seat of war, and nearly 13,000 were sent home on account of sickness Where one man was under the surgeon's hands for wounds, twelve were under the doctor's hands for typhus fever, dysentery, or some other of the diseases brought on by bad food, improper or insufficient camping arrangements, or the dissipations incident to a crowded camp, in which men have much idle time. 7,500 French soldiers were slain in battle; 50,000 perished of disease, and 65,000 more were discharged and sent home from the seat of war, as invalids. In our Mexican war our army lost nearly 13,000 men, while quite as many were discharged for sickness. Only 1848 men were killed, or died of their wounds, in all the battles fought, as numerous as they were. These facts, while it should inspirit the soldiers in battle, should also make them cautious of their battle, should also make them cantious of their health when lying in camp, or on long marches. Good plain food, eaten at regular intervals, healthful and amusing exercises, sufficient clothing to protect the body from the suddent shanges of weather, and the avoidance of all excess in eating and drinking, especially intoxicating stimulants, will do much to preserve the good health of the soldiers.
