The Robert's Guards will meet this evening for drill, and to make arrangements for a parade on the fourth of July. The members of this fine corps have determined to equip and make it a permanent organization.

ON THE MARCH.—We learn that the two regiments under Colonels Biddle and Shammone, which left here on Saturday morning, and were telegraphed to stop at Hopewell, subsequently received orders to proceed to Bedford, for which place they took up the line of march yesterday morning, a distance of twenty-two miles.

A BROTHER OF SOLDIERS IN THE RIVER.—Yesterday afternoon nearly the entire Wisconsin regiment marched in companies from their encampment to the Susquehanna river, above the Water House, and indulged in the luxury of a bath in its cool and limpid waters. The novel sight was witnessed by an immense crowd of male citizens, who enjoyed the scene as much as the soldiers seemed to enjoy their aquatic sports. The men, refreshed and invigorated by their ablutions, returned and returned in good order to the camp, apparently gratified that an opportunity had been afforded them to bathe in the noble old Susquehanna.

RATHER OMINOUS.—A gentleman who arrived last night from Hagerstown, Md., states that there is a strong secessionist feeling in the vicinity of that place. On Tuesday night, after the troops left for Williamsport, the inhabitants of Funksville hailed down the Union colors and substituted secession in ones. The guards who were left at camp became alarmed, but luckily a portion of the troops returned from Williamsport, and the Union flag again floated on the breeze. A member of a Columbia company, hearing that a tavern keeper named Martin, a leading secessionist, was determined to keep his colors up, went in company with two companions to the tavern, seized the tavern keeper by the hair of the head, and holding him out arms length, made him give three cheers for the Union. It had the desired effect. This circumstance, with others, shows plainly that Maryland is "a snake in the grass," and is only loyal when kept in subjection by strong Union forces.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—NARROW ESCAPE.—On Friday last Messrs. A. J. Jones, David McCormick, Jacob R. Eby, and O. C. Zimmerman, of this city, visited Hagerstown. They intended returning on Saturday morning, but missing the train, they took passage on a hand car, with a view of making connection with the passenger train leaving Chambersburg at noon. When rounding a curve some five miles this side of Hagerstown, they discovered a locomotive approaching from the opposite direction. They signalled to the engineer, who promptly reversed the motion of the engine; but the close proximity of the machines, and the speed at which both were going, rendered a collision inevitable; seeing which the occupants of the car jumped out to save their lives. They had scarcely made the perilous leap, when the collision took place, the locomotive thundering in to the hand-car and shattering it to atoms! Had the gentlemen retained their places a moment longer, the probability is that all of them would have been instantly killed! We learn that Mr. Jones was considerably injured by the force of the fall, as was also Mr. McCormick, and one of the others was slightly bruised. Mr. Zimmerman, more lucky, landed safely upon his feet, just in time to witness the collision. The gentlemen, after recovering from their fright, and examining their wounds, took passage on the locomotive and proceeded to the next station, where they procured another hand-car, which conveyed them to Chambersburg, arriving there in time to take the Harrisburg train.

PASSAGE OF TROOPS.—On Saturday evening several regiments from eastern and western New York, about six thousand in all, arrived here over the Northern Central and Lebanon Valley roads, and passed on to Washington City. The men were armed and equipped, ready to go into service. Some eighty-seven officers accompanied these regiments. The second Wisconsin regiment also reached here on Saturday evening and pitched their tents on a vacant lot near the Pennsylvania Railroad shops, with the expectation of remaining two or three days, to obtain arms. Yesterday, however, they received orders to proceed directly to Washington, the Secretary of War having made provision for arms, which were furnished them in the afternoon by the military authorities here. Accordingly they struck their tents this morning and left for the Federal Capital. The Wisconsin soldiers are a fine looking set of men, elegantly equipped, and were much admired by hundreds of our citizens who visited their encampment during the day. The regiment is one thousand and fifty strong, composed mainly of men from the mining and lumber districts, under command of the following officers: Brigadier General, Rufus King, editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel; Colonel, S. Park Odon; Lieutenant Colonel, Henry K. Peck; Major, Duncan Macdonald; Adjutant, E. M. Hunter; Quartermaster, James D. Ruggles; Quartermaster Sergeant, V. M. Lewis; Colonel, A. L. Henry. In general appearance and intelligence these troops are fully equal to the Rhode Islanders, and a credit to the State they represent.

DISPERATE ATTEMPT TO ASSASSINATE AN OFFICER AT CAMP CURTIN.—On Saturday some little excitement was occasioned by an attempt of a discharged soldier to assassinate Capt. John H. Taggart, of the Wayne Guards, of Philadelphia, now stationed at Camp Curtin. Among the men enlisted in this corps in Philadelphia, was one named John Votter, a large, powerful man, over six feet high, weighing some two hundred pounds. On the day the company left Philadelphia, Votter was seized with a fit on the street, and it required three or four of his comrades to assist him. After his arrival at Camp Curtin, these fits were of almost daily occurrence, and Votter frequently fell down in the ranks while laboring under their attack. Except this disability, his general health was good. The Captain felt it his duty to discharge Votter from the company on account of his disability, and on Friday morning took him to the surgeon at the camp for examination. The surgeon being engaged at the time, fixed three o'clock in the afternoon for the examination. About noon Votter called at Captain Taggart's tent, and said he did not think the "spells," as he called them, unfitted him for duty, and he had made up his mind not to go to the surgeon's to be examined, and that he was determined to stay with the company. Captain Taggart remarked to him that he had better not make up his mind until three o'clock arrived. Nothing further was said on either side, and Votter left the tent. At three o'clock Capt. Taggart ordered Sergeant Vallee to take Votter over to the surgeon. The Sergeant went to Votter's tent, and communicated the order to him. Votter positively refused to go, and said no one in the company could "make him go." Sergeant Vallee reported Votter's answer to the Captain, who, as a precaution, knowing the desperate determination of the man he had to deal with, took his revolver with him, and proceeded to Votter's tent. The Captain spoke kindly to him at first, saying it would be better for him to go quietly to the surgeon than to be forced to go. To this Votter replied he would not go, and no man could make him go if he did not choose to. Capt. Taggart then, in a peremptory manner, ordered him to go with the Sergeant, or he would have him put under arrest. At this Votter approached the Captain in a threatening manner, and raised his hand as if to strike. Capt. T. drew his revolver, and told Votter if he advanced one step further he would shoot him down. This checked his hostile demonstration, and in a few minutes Votter went with the Sergeant to the surgeon, and after being examined, he was declared to be unfit for service, and discharged. Capt. Taggart then told Votter to get ready to go to Philadelphia in the 6.15 P. M. train. Votter immediately absented himself, and could not be found in time to take the train. About six o'clock, during the absence of Capt. Taggart in Harrisburg, Votter appeared in camp, and displayed a large dirk knife, which he declared he intended to kill the Captain with. He sharpened it on the stone used by the men for sharpening their table knives. Capt. Taggart arrived shortly after this, and being warned of the intentions of Votter, he detailed a guard of six men under Sergeant Dougherty, to arrest Votter, and confine him until midnight, and then take him to Harrisburg and put him on board the cars for Philadelphia. Early in the evening, Votter again appeared in the company's quarters, prowling between two tents. Two of the guard approached him when he drew his knife, and commenced parlaying with them. Capt. Taggart came from his tent, and ordered the guard to arrest Votter. At this Votter, with the knife in his hand, sprang towards the Captain, who stood in front of his tent. Capt. Taggart was ready for him, however, and cocked his revolver to shoot. Seeing this, Votter changed his course, and darted on one side of the tent, and ran a square or two down to the lower end of the camp, flourishing the open knife in his hand, and making a general "clearing" among the other companies, who did not know what to make of the strange apparition. The guard followed him, but could not find him, and returned again to the company's quarters. Capt. Taggart ordered them to be on the alert, for he felt sure Votter would return again before midnight. Sure enough, a little after eleven o'clock, a man was seen prowling about the back part of the tent. It proved to be Votter. The guard watched him, and saw him make for the same quarters he had entered early in the evening. Corporal Bayne encountered him at a charge bayonet, and demanded him to surrender. He drew his knife again, when the Corporal told him if he attempted to use it he would bayonet him. Two others of the guard were soon on the spot, and Votter was secured. The guard escorted him to the depot at midnight, and sent him to Philadelphia. The officers of the company believe that Votter's mind had become unsettled in consequence of his discharge, as previous to this affair he has given little or no trouble. Fortunately, the affair terminated without any serious consequences, although for a time it looked as if blood was sure to be spilled.

[Special Dispatch to the Daily Telegraph.]
Hagerstown, June 22.
A man was observed fording the river yesterday, dressed in a peculiar style, and upon reaching the Maryland side one of Capt. McMullin's Rangers arrested him. He was searched at once when it was discovered that he had very important letters for a lawyer of this place named Alvey. The prisoner was quietly conducted to a place of safe keeping and divested of his clothing. One of Capt. McMullin's men disguised himself in the same, and represented himself as the genuine bearer of dispatches to Mr. Alvey, who fell into the trap and divulged important matters to his supposed Virginia friend. After everything had been surely accomplished, Mr. Alvey was arrested and subsequently sent to Washington City. His arrest created quite a sensation in this town as he was never suspected of treason, and stood high in the estimation of the citizens here. A traitor's doom awaits him.

Hagerstown, June 22.
An express has arrived from Cumberland, which says there is no truth in the report of the Cumberland Home Guards having been massacred or wounded at their station at New Creek Bridge. They numbered 20, and all escaped. They had two small iron cannons, but spiked them both, and threw them into the creek. Col. Wallace was encamped near Cumberland, on an elevated point commanding the town. He has no present apprehensions of an attack, but has full confidence in his ability to defend his position. He has also an abundance of provisions and ammunition. On Wednesday after the burning of the railroad bridge the mountaineers collected to the number of six hundred to seven hundred, armed with shotguns and hunting rifles, to assist Col. Wallace to defend his position, under the apprehensions of an attack by the enemy, and are ready to return at a moment's notice. One of them killed another, and one was slightly wounded by the careless use of their firearms. A Virginia colonel who was taken at Romney, together with eight privates, are under guard at Cumberland.

Col. Bowman and Mr. Chase, who were seized by the secessionists opposite Williamsport, are safe in jail at Martinsburg.
Mr. Barker of the 18th regiment, at Pittsburg, was shot in the knee on Thursday; and a private of the 8th regiment was accidentally shot in the leg yesterday, and must suffer amputation. There is no serious sickness in the hospital here, and but thirty-eight cases in all.

bated secession as a heresy destructive of the Government, which should be effectually crushed out. The war now in progress, he contended, was not of the North against the South, but as conducted by the Government for the perpetuity of the Union, the maintenance of the Constitution, and the enforcement of the laws made in pursuance of that instrument.
He earnestly appealed to his auditors to uphold and defend the time honored flag and resist the despotism now menacing even this capital, reminding his hearers that history shows a republic once destroyed is never re-established. He in effect condemned the late Administration for not suppressing secession before it assumed formidable proportions and cited the example of Gen. Jackson as one which should have been followed. He thanked God we yet have in our midst that glorious old soldier Gen. Scott, who stands up with a stalwart form and iron arm, now as heretofore, in defence of his country.

He spoke of the perils attending the declaration of Union sentiments in disloyal states, and said if the southern despotism attempt to coerce Tennessee out of the Union, the eastern part of that State intends to call upon the Government to sustain her in the struggle. They might overcome her before aid could reach her—her enemies might devastate her fields and drench them in blood—they might sack and burn her cities and towns and even convert her hillsides and valleys into burial grounds—but they never could make of East Tennessee a land of slaves.

ARRANGEMENT WITH GEN. MCLELLAN.
Secession Forces to Keep out of the State.
LOUISVILLE, June 22.
The morning papers contain letters from General Buckner and Gov. Magoffin, giving the particulars of an agreement made with Gen. McClellan.
The Kentucky authorities will protect the United States property in the State, enforce the laws of the United States, according to the interpretation of the United States Court, and enforce all obligations of neutrality, as against the Southern States.
General McClellan agrees to respect the territory of Kentucky, even though southern armies occupy it. In such case he will call the Kentucky authorities to remove the southern forces. Should Kentucky fail to do this, he claims the same right of occupation as given to the South; and also if Kentucky is unable to remove the southern forces, he will call for the aid of the government troops, and if successful in removing them, General McClellan agrees to withdraw.
If the Administration adopts a different policy, Kentucky is to have timely notice, and if Kentucky changes the same notice is to be given by this agreement.
Gen. Buckner gave Governor Harris, of Tennessee, notice, and Harris gave assurances that the Territory of Kentucky would be respected until occupied by the Federal troops, and also gave peremptory orders to the Tennessee officers to this effect.

Soldiers from the Virginia side of the Potomac say there were no important alarms last night, while others represent affairs quiet, more so during the last two nights, than heretofore.
Gen. Scott has been remonstrated with by Western men for ordering the retreat of Caldwell over the Potomac. The old hero said: "It's all right—all right; you will say so in three months hence."
Eight car loads of muskets have been sent from the arsenal here to Harrisburg, and seven car loads of 24-pounder cannon balls have been brought to the arsenal.

The Manassas correspondent of the Charleston Mercury, dated the 18th, writes that the people about the rebel camp are hostile, and that it is dangerous for the soldiers to leave camp alone. Gentlemen come into camp daily, who fear their own slaves will murder them.
The lower classes of the whites are finding the slaves to such a degree that civil war is on the point of being inaugurated, and their own people are hostile to their rank. The latter apply for passports, money, which Gen. Beauregard grants, provided that no horses, wagons, etc., are taken from the State.
