OFFICIAL.

The following letter from Col. Charles J. Biddle, is an official, authentic as well as graphic description of the march of his regiment from Harrisburg to Bedford, which will be perused with interest by the readers of the TELEGRAPH: HEADQUARTERS OF DETACHMENT PENNA. June 23d, 1861.

To Major General McCall:

General—I have the honor to report my arrival here to day. On the 21st, while in command at Camp Curtin, I received from head-quarters an order to prepare two regiments for immediate and active service. At the time no regiment in the Camp was armed or equipped, or supplied with military clothing. Through the active personal assistance of the Governor of the Commonwealth, and other public functionaries, within less than twelve hours the Braue, Mrs. Bradley, S.E. Rifle Regiment under my command, and the Rife Regiment under my command, and the Fifth Infantry under Col. S. Simmons, (who is also a captain in the Seventh Infantry, U. S. army,) were armed, equipped, and largely supplied with military clothing, and started from Camp Curtin at about 3 o'clock on the morning of the 22d—the detachment being under my command as senior by date of commission ommand, as senior by date of commission from the State—under "orders to proceed in the direction of Cumberland, to defend the oorder of this State and support the Indiana Regiment in the U.S. service, now in that vi-cinity." On the evening of the 22d we reached Hopewell, and in obedience to your order communicated to me by telegraph, encamped there.
At 3 o'clock on the morning of the 23d we took up our line of march for this place.

Fixler. L

Veech, of Fayette county. These gentlemen filed their bonds, were sworn in, and entered on their duties to-day. The Paymasters Depended on the part of the paymasters and with a constant for this place.

The day was hot and the road unusually dusty, and it was the first foot march for this place.

Fixler, L. Ferley, M. Fehry, M. and could, with some aid from wagons, have been pushed on much further, under the in-centive of a call to perform instantly the duty assigned to us. On reaching Bedford, your telegraphic order to halt reached me, and I then moved to this encampment. The spirits of the men did not flag till it was known that Hayanaugh, C their movement was no longer towards an enemy. The actual distance marched was twenty-two miles, under circumstances of weather and

It may place officers of regular military education in spheres of wider usefulness than subordinate positions in the line of the United States army, and will greatly contribute to the comfort and efficiency of volunteer troops; of inconvenience from it, I can imagine none. In Col. Simmons's requisence in the superiority in rank which date of commission gave to me his junior in years and in military service, I recognize the spirit which now, as in the war with Mexico, animates officers of the regular army in their relations with General McCall, the organization of the fifteen officers appointed from civil life.
