LIVELY TIME. -The city is overrun with reurning volunteers waiting to be paid off, and the streets present an unusually martial-like and lively aspect. It is to be regretted that the rum shops find many patrons among the soldiers, some of whom yesterday disgraced themselves and the uniforms they wear by getting drunk and indulging in riotous conduct. The liquor sellers are now reaping a rich pecuniary harvest by drugging our gallant defenders with day and stopping at the seat of war, and left same day liquid poison. We do not envy them the money realized from their iniquitous and demoralizing traffic.

Nature rebels against it. The little lungs and limbs need bracing and strengthening. The growing brains need rest from the continual straining and striving. Therefore turn the young ones out, and let them run wild for the next two months. Never mind if their hands get dirty, their faces browned, their hair twisted and their clothes torn. It
