OUR PLATFORM. THE UNION—THE CONSTITUTION—AND THE ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAW.

HARRISBURG PA. Wednesday Morning, July 24, 1861. THE BATTLE OF BULL RUN.

The news which we gave yesterday of the battle of Bull Run, was of a character to excite the utmost anxiety and most intense excitement.

The history which the American people are engaged in making is one of a positive and definite character, that is designed not only to portray and preserve the evidence of their own devotion to principle and claim to valor, but to decide whether they are endowed with the power of self-government.

From any point that we can possibly view the result of the battle of Bull Run, we are forced to regard it as a disaster, and not a defeat.

THE RETURNED VOLUNTEERS.

The return of the men composing the second and fifth Pennsylvania regiments has given rise to many conjectures and speculations, since the result of the battle of Bull Run, alike injurious and unjust to the gallant men who compose those organizations.

We give this information to vindicate the man of the second regiment, who are as gallant and as brave a body of men as ever shouldered a musket.

Whenever we see these statements fairly explained or disproved, we will give our readers the benefit of the explanation or disproof.

MAKING HISTORY.

Every nation has a history to make before it can be written, and in the manufacture of that history the American people are now as busily engaged as they were formerly intent on the making of money, the achievement of social and professional reputation and the building of towns and cities.

The history which the American people are engaged in making is one of a positive and definite character, that is designed not only to portray and preserve the evidence of their own devotion to principle and claim to valor, but to decide whether they are endowed with the power of self-government.

There is no mistaking such a history. There is no mistaking the differences in the contest which we are now waging—and there must also be no misapprehending the history we are writing with the ram-rod and the point of the bayonet.

WHAT WAS EXPECTED. We stated a few days since, that orders had been received here for the breaking up of all the camps in Pennsylvania, and the pushing forward of the troops to the city of Washington.

We have again later news from Europe. Breadstuffs are quiet and prices steady. Cotton firm at fully the previous rates, and provisions steady.

WHO TAKES CARE OF THE VOLUNTEER?

The ambition of man is a laudable characteristic of his nature, as long as it leads him into paths of usefulness or the performance of real deeds of noble bravery and unselfishness.

We want the officers in command of companies and regiments to ponder these suggestions. We want them to reflect and answer to themselves, whether they are using the power of their position to promote the comfort, the health and the usefulness of those under their command.

A CALM REVIEW OF THE RESULTS OF THE DISASTER AT BULL RUN teaches the people the necessity of caution and discrimination in their acceptance of the many flying and exaggerated reports both as to the movements of the army and the result of battle.

THE MOVEMENTS OF THE SECRETARY OF WAR, as will be seen by the following paragraph, which we clip from the account of the battle of Bull Run, in the New York Evening Post of last night, are prompt and extensive, and perfectly characteristic of the vigorous labor of the man.

At Louisville yesterday the news of the defeat caused a depression of the Union men, but they were resolute, and in an affray one of the rebel leaders was shot dead.

Two more Massachusetts regiments, the twelfth and thirteenth, leave Boston this week.
